A SUCCESSOR TO BRIAND IS BEING SOUGHT

President Doumergue Summons Socialist Leader To Conference After Resignation of Veteran Frenchman's Cabinet Following Non-Confidence Vote.

PARIS, July 17.—(U. P.)—The Briand government, pledged to ratification of the debt funding agreement with the United States and to early rehabilitation of French finance, resigned today after defeat in the chamber of deputies, President Doumergue accepting the resignation.

The vote was 288 to 243 and by this ballot the chamber expressed its sentiments with respect to the cabinet's proposal that dictatorial powers be reposed in it until November 30, 1926, for the purpose of meeting the financial crisis.

Doumergue summoned Edouard Herriot for a conference after the cabinet's resignation had been accepted. Speculation regarding the next cabinet centers around Herriot because it was his attack which defeated the government. Poincare's name also is mentioned, but talk of Herriot already has reached the stage of suggesting possible members of his cabinet.

Discuss Possible Cabinet.

These include Maurice Bokanowski, Paul Palmleve, Andre Tardieu, Anatole DeMonzie and Deputy Marin. This indicated that Herriot, if he formed a ministry, would seek a coalition of the right and left.

Defeat came when the chamber voted against consideration of the financial project. The government made this a question of confidence, demanding immediate consideration of this project so that it could be disposed of and the government's own financial project introduced before the chamber.

Minister of Finance Caillaux, who, under the dictatorial powers bill would have controlled the immediate future of France, intervened at the last moment with an impassioned address in which he warned the chamber of the disaster ahead unless strong hands immediately were permitted to grapple with the financial problem. France, he said, was gradually slipping into an economic morass, almost without her citizens realizing the uncomfortable depths toward which the country's course was leading.

Extraordinary Scenes.

Extraordinary scenes preceded the vote. Former Herriot descended from his place as president of the chamber to attack the dictatorial powers bill as an assault on republican institutions. His words aroused Briand, the veteran premier, to anger, and the two men battled for the confidence of the chamber with every deputy alert to the momentous potentialities of their oratorical play. The government was raising the spectre of dictatorship, charged the radical and socialist Herriot.

Leon Blum, leader of the socialists, broke into the exchange to shout: "I would rather have a king

Herriot Looms As New Premier

Edouard Herriot, French socialist leader, is considered a strong possibility as the next premier following resignation Saturday of the Briand government, the result of failure to receive a confidence vote in the chamber of deputies. Poincare's name is also mentioned.

Little Damage Done Although Filing Racks Were Only Few Feet Away.

A fire starting from an electric iron which had been left connected with the current threatened damage to the records of the state railway commission in the capitol Saturday evening.

When the firemen arrived a wooden box on which the iron had been sitting was in flames. The flames were licking the ceiling directly above and were eating into the linoleum on the floor. Fortunately the only inflammable ma-

DENY PAROLE TO MAN WHO ROBBED NURSE

Joe Denny Spoiled His Chances When He Stole Twenty-seven Dollars While Recovering From Scarlet Fever In Omaha Hospital.

BOARD OPENS DOORS FOR OTHER ESCAPERS

E. E. Youell Who Once Took Clandestine Departure and Rollin Curtis Who Hid In Capitol Building Are Given Freedom.

If Convict Joe Denny of the Nebraska penitentiary had no other black mark against his record than the crime of breaking and entering at Omaha, for which he is serving 7 to 10 years, the state pardon board might have let him out on parole after hearing his application last Tuesday.

But Denny's theft of $27 from a nurse in an Omaha hospital who was taking care of him when he had scarlet fever queered his chance of freedom. The board learned that he was taken ill in the Douglas county jail, after receiving his prison sentence, and was transferred to a hospital for treatment. While he was there the episode of the money stolen from the nurse occurred. Denny admitted his part in it.

He escaped at the time, being nearly recovered from his illness; but a little later, after he had committed several other thefts and small burglaries he was re-arrested and sent to the penitentiary.

Other Escapers Paroled.

Just to show that it has no prejudice against men who break away from the custody of officers or go away without permission while on parole, the board opened the doors of the penitentiary for E. E. Youell,

MRS. M'PHERSON PUT ON DEFENSE IN JURY'S PROBE

Agua Prieta, Mexico, Presidente, Charges Kidnaping Story Untrue.

Claims Evangelist Rode To Border Town In Car Instead Of Walking.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 17.—(U. P.)—Aimee Semple McPherson will be placed on the defense again Tuesday when the grand jury, investigating her recent disappearance, resumes its work.

The district attorney's office said that the report of President E. E. Ernesto Boubion of Augua Prieta, Mexico—when the evangelist re-appeared after having been reported drowned—would be read into the records.

The Mexican village send supports the charge that the kidnaping of Mrs. McPherson, was unfrue.

Boubion's charges are that the evangelist drove to Agua Prita in a motorcar rather than walked and crawled over the desert after having escaped her abductors.

Immediately after the district attorney's office announced that Boubion's charges would be made officially there came an announcement that William Appel of Douglas, Ariz., had filed an affidavit purporting to show Boubion had attempted a blackmail scheme on the evangelist.

Says Charges Denied.

Appel's affidavit declares that he was an interpreter at a conference when Boubion asked to be "satisfactorily fixed" as pay for keeping quiet. Appel says that the evangelist at that time denied all of Boubion's charges.

One of the new developments which had excited court fans apparently collapsed today when Deputy District Attorney Ryan and Chief of Detectives Cline returned Blaze Damages Stock of Phelps-Underwood Late Saturday Evening.

NUCKOLLS FAIR SUFFERS LOSS

Blaze Of Unknown Origin Destroys Seven Buildings At Nelson Exposition Grounds Within Thirty Minutes.

(Special to The Star.)

NELSON, Neb., July 17.—Fire broke out on the Nuckolls county fair grounds here Saturday afternoon at 5:30 and within thirty minutes seven buildings at this splendid show place practically burned to the ground.

The origin of the fire is unknown but it started in or near the dining hall and owing to extreme dry weather before the alarm reached town it had gained such headway that it was entirely beyond control.

The amphitheater and one main building are all that were saved from the large group which housed the several departments of the fair.

The large crowd gathered here at the homecoming jubilee deserted the park and hastened to the scene, as did also the Nelson fire department but all to no avail.

The dry grass aided in spreading the fire very rapidly and it was by the most heroic efforts that the flames were confined to the grounds and the amphitheater on the east side saved.

SEVERAL LIVES ARE CLAIMED BY HEAT WAVE

RECORDS BROKEN IN THE NORTHWEST

Several Minnesota Points Report Mercury at 104, While Unofficial Readings Fix Mark at 110—Relief Promised.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I. N. S.)—Eleven deaths was the toll of the elements tonight following a day of unusual heat in the middlewest and a tornado whih did damage estimated at $100,000 near Ashland, Wis.

In Minneapolis four persons succumbed to the intense heat and a like number was stricken here. The tornado death toll stood at three late tonight following a complete checkup by city officials.

The mercury here climbed steadily all day from early morning, its peak at 4 o'clock, when weather bureau reports showed a temperature of 98 degrees.

Temporary Relief.

Then came cool north breezes which offered temporary relief in the evening, but later passed by leaving the city again in the grip of torrid temperature.

Indications were for cooler weather tomorrow and Monday.

Three of the deaths in Minneapolis were by drowning along the crowded beaches, where thousands sought relief from the heat which reached a maximum of 102.3 degrees. Relief was promised by weather bureau officials for tomorrow.

Records For 50 Years Broken.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 17.—(U.P.)—The terrific heat in Minnesota and northern Wisconsin has taken a toll of nine lives in two days and suffering was still acute tonight. Despite a lowering temperature, little relief was in sight.

St. Paul's highest temperature today was 93, and the weather forecaster's announcement for Sunday brought little encouragement when it was stated that it probably would be warmer.

TECUMSEH, Neb., July 17.—The preliminary hearing of Dale Holden will be before County Judge F. C. Radke in Tecumseh Monday. The judge will hold session in the district court room, to provide more room for the many who will want to hear the evidence.

Holden is held under a first degree murder complaint in connection with the fatal shooting of William Trute of Tecumseh on the night of July 3. State Deputy Sheriff L. E. Shurtleff, who is held on the same charge and who will have a hearing later, deputized Holden some weeks ago to assist him in the work of chasing violators of the liquor law.

The men went to the Trute barn where they thought there was liquor, and Shurtleff left Holden on guard while he went for a search warrant. In the meantime someone advised Trute that men were in his barn and he returned home and demanded to know who was in the barn and what was wanted. He entered the barn, the shooting followed and Trute died in a Beatrice hospital on July 5.

A number of witnesses have been held for the hearing and it will be of great interest. County Attorney John Davey of Tecumseh and Assistant County Attorney John Yaeger of Omaha will have charge of the prosecution. The defense will be by Reavis & Beghtol of Lincoln and Jay C. Moore of Tecumseh.

KEARNEY, Neb., July 17.—Perhaps there is some justification for arresting autoists traveling through Buffalo county at a speed exceeding the state limit, thirty-five miles, at least interviews with Sheriff Sam Parr and County Attorney Hugh Drake would so indicate and their defense is substantiated by a review of the records.

SAYS RATE CASE FARM VICTORY

C. B. Steward Declares Decision Proves Value Of Agricultural Organization.

Increased Rate Would Have Cost Forty Dollars to Every Quarter Section.

Failure by western railroads to obtain a 5 per cent increase in freight rates forcefully exemplifies the value and effectiveness of farm organizations when their leaders are working together in harmony and co-operation, declared Secretary C. B. Steward of the Nebraska farm bureau federation Saturday afternoon, commenting on the decision of the interstate commerce commission which denied the advance by the carriers.

"It was one of the hardest fought battles over railroad rates which has been fought in recent years," said Mr. Steward. "The companies were represented by the best legal and transportation talent of the country.

"Realizing the necessity of united action, leaders of farm organizations of the corn belt formed an organization at Des Moines and employed General Fred S. Jackson as legal counsel for the purpose of fighting the application of the railroads for 5 per cent increase.

"Meetings of this committee were harmonious in working out a plan of defense in the interest of the farmers. The work of preparing the evidence and appearing before the commission was apportioned among the different states and every organization did its part loyally.

"The duty of preparing the agricultural exhibit for the state of Nebraska developed upon the Nebraska farm bureau federation. The secretary of the state organization began the preparation of evidence immediately after the Des Moines meeting in June and worked continually until the final appearance at the hearing before the interstate commerce commission in January.

"In the preparation of this evidence the Nebraska farm bureau federation was ably supported by the Nebraska farmers' u... co-operative livestock commission houses, and local county farm bureaus and farmers' unions. The result demonstrates to the farmers of Nebraska the necessity of building up and supporting their state wide organization so that they may be properly represented before public service bureaus and commissions and legislative bodies. When agriculture speaks with a united voice, it receives the respectful attention of other groups and interests.

"The decision of the interstate commerce commission denying the application of the railroads for a 5 percent increase in freight rates in the western district means a saving of $40 per year in transportation costs to every quarter section of land in Nebraska, based upon the incoming and outgoing tonnage.

"This is an immense saving with the similar cost necessary to maintain the farm organization and farmers should realize the effectiveness of the defense made in their behalf."

Chicago Motor Club Will Fight Against Police Speed Traps

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I. N. S.)—A bill to compel justices and police magistrates of the state to keep records of fees obtained from motorists for violation of traffic and speed laws was announced here tonight by Charles H. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club.

The bill, which will be introduced at the next session of the legislature, will be another wedge in the motor club's fight against speed traps and extortion of money from transient motorists by town and village authorities.

The measure has the sanction of Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who is in charge of the present investigation of illegal fining of automobilists, Mr. Hayes said.

"We need to impose severe penalties on those who lie in wait as a sort of legalized banditry against the passing automobilist," said the motor club president. "Only in this way shall we be able to rid the state of the nuisance of highway banditry for all time."

The proposed measure is said to be designed closely along the lines of a similar law now in effest in Oregon.

The demonstration took place in a drug store which was soon emptied o fits stock of malt tonic and temperance beer by spectators convinced of LaGuardia's wizardry.

Prohibition Director Chester Mills, invited to attend, did not.

LaGuardia was accompanied by bondsmen who were not required to function, Congressman John Morin, Pittsburgh, and Maj. "Fighting Mike" Kelly of the old sixty-ninth.

M'MULLEN WILL RETURN EARLY

Plans To Be In Lincoln For Board Of Equalization Meeting.

Not To Make Trip Through Yellowstone With Other Governors.

Because he thinks he should be in Lincoln on August 2, when the state board of equalization is to meet and hear whatever county officials may desire to present in the way of evidence refuting railroad contentions that farm lands are underassessed—that being also the last date allowed by law for fixing the state tax levy—Governor McMullen has decided that he will have to forego the trip through Yellowstone national park with executives of other states, following the national governors' conference at Cheyenne.

The conference is to start July 26 and continue until noon of the 28th, when the party will go for a 6 days' sightseeing tour, by automobile and train. Governor McMullen expects to attend the conference and will be one of the speakers there, but he expects to tear himself away after the sessions are concluded and come back to Nebraska.

Prior to fixing the state tax levy, the state board of equalization, of which the governor is chairman, must hear all objections and complaints and make whatever adjustments it may deem proper to put different counties, or different classes of property, on the same general level. Mr. McMullen deems it his duty to be present when these matters come before the board.

Entertainment Program.

The program outlined for the entertainment of the governors and their wives, as guests of the state of Wyoming, after the conference is ended, follows this schedule:

July 28—From Cheyenne to Casper by special train, in the evening.

July 29—From Casper by automobile to Salt Creek, Teapot Dome oil fields, Buffalo and Sheridan.

July 30—Auto trip from Sheridan over Big Horn mountains to Worland, thence by train to Thermopolis. Night trip from Thermopolis to Cody, arriving there the morning of the 31st, with breakfast on the train.

It was decided tonight to continue the rodeo, in which scores of cowboys and cowgirls from several western states have been participating the past three days, over Sunday in order that spectators from Omaha, Lincoln and other cities of this section may attend.

WATER CARNIVAL PLANS ARE LAID

Fourth Annual Red Cross Event In Muny Pool August 6 and 7.

The Fourth annual water carnival of the Lincoln and Lancaster country branch of the Red Cross will be held at the municipal pool, Friday, August 6, Mrs. Max Armstrong, secretary announced Saturday. The carnival will continue two days under the direction of Capt. J. S. Lawx of St. Louis, in charge of the swimming, life saving and first aid work of the Red Cross.

The carnival will be conducted in two divisions, the junior and senior. The junior competitions will be held the first day and in the evening the senior events will be staged. The second day will be given over to the team events.

Since the inauguration of the swimming carnival four years ago interest here has increased until, it is said by national headquarters officers, Lincoln has developed into one of the foremost acquatic cities among the inland towns supporting Red Cross chapters.

When the work was started there were few in Lincoln connected with the swimming program as conducted by the Red Cross. The first year saw several given the rating of life savers. Each year since has seen the number increased until in 1926 the total has reached 149. Of these forty-four are men, twenty-three women, seventy boys and twelve girls.

A majority of these who have qualified as life savers will take part in the August carnival, Mrs. Armstrong declares. There will also be team and individual competitors from several of the larger places in the state, and a few from some of the smaller towns.

Three States Want Bandits Trapped in Attempted Robbery

SUPERIOR, Wis., July 17.—(U. P.)—Authorities of three states have made charges against the five bandits who were trapped by Superior police Tuesday when they attempted to hold up the Bank of Commerce here.

Matthew McNeil, alleged leader of the gang, is in custody in Milwaukee in connection with a bank robbery and the other four members were taken today to Minneapolis. Two of them will be taken from there to Oelwein, Iowa, to face charges of torturing a farmer and stealing diamonds from a cache in his home.

Thomas Barone, one of the bandits, faces a charge of murdering Fred Devlin in an attempted payroll holdup in Minneapolis. Minor charges have been made against theother three, but two will be taken to Iowa.

STOCK MARKET MORE BULLISH

Prices Tend Consistently Higher, With Two Exceptions, During Week.

Oil Men Not Worried Over Possible Over-Production Crude Oil.

NEW YORK, July 17.—(INS)—With General Motors playing the leading role, this week's market for stocks was on the whole quite a bullish affair.

General Motors closed today at 168 1-8 after making a new high level at 169. U. S. Steel also finished the week strong, closing at 143 5-8, although an hour before the close it had reached a new high of 145.

It was a bullish week, with prices tending higher consistently except on two occasions, once on Thursday and again on Friday when irregularities possessed the market and brought about moderate declines. Buying quickly picked up, however, and prices quickly went back into the upward stride.

As has been the case for the last few weeks, the entire market seemed to revolve about General Motors and U. S. Steel, the two market leaders. The former stock was a steady gainer all week and while the advances in steel were more moderate they were sufficient to keep the bulls in a confident mood. Both rails and oils showed a tendency not to be affected by the material advances in standard industrials.

Oil Men Unperturbed.

Further talk of likelihood of dangerous increase in production of crude oil helped the unsettled conditions. Oil officials, however, refused to be worried over any possible alarming increase in output. They pointed out that the leaders of the industry have attained the current stabilization only after great efforts and much sacrifice and will not permit output to get out of hand again.

The doubts as to how long opposition to the new Van Swearingen Nickel Plate plan will delay consummation of other important mergers had a retarding effect on some stocks in the railroad group. The Van Swearingens have been in conference during the week with Pere Marquette officials and officials of other roads involved in the proposed merger.

The railroad merger question is thrown into a muddle by reason of the opposition to the new plan. No matter what concessions may be made to the Chesepeake & Ohio minority they will simply strengthen the morale of the Pere Marquette interests, who reputedly are demanding "more" so that it may be several weeks yet before any decided steps toward consummation of the Nickel Plate merger will be possible.

Loss is Wiped Out.

Wednesday witnessed a revival of the rediscount rate increase scare and when it proved to be without foundation the rally under General Motors' leadership wiped out the average price loss of earlier in the week.

Bankers pointed out that the increase of over 5 per cent in the ratio of the local banks for the week, together with cutting down of $92,000,000 in bills discounted did not indicate any early change in the rediscount rate.

Big Wheat Advance.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I.N.S.)—From the low point for wheat this spring, reached the end of June, wheat at the close of the present week has had an advance of 16 1-4c.

For the past week and the preceding week as well, the market has been practically dominated by the milling interests. The upturn resulted when mills came into the pit and brought heavily of futures against flour sales, which had not yet been covered by cash wheat purchases. The general market is 7 3-4c higher to 2 1-8c lower than a week ago. December showed the weakness.

Corn activity got under way almost simultaneously with the first boom in wheat and liquidation was reported well closed. There has been a check in the operations of cash markets along with news of decreases in the business of the country offerings. Futures are 6 1-8c higher to 6 7-8c lower than a week ago. September showed the decline.

Oats have faced hard sledding, with the general trade rather dubious over the right of this grain to claim even a reflected advance. The strong position of other grains has had a partial effect for a higher price scale. A heavy crop movement is anticipated. The market is 1 1-2c to 1 7-8c higher than a week ago.

Provisions declined fractionally.

Hog Market Higher.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I.N.S.)—The general hog market is 15c higher than a week ago and about 25c lower than at the high spot reached last Thursday. Receipts were estimated at 111,000 for the week, against 112,000 last week. Receipts yesterday, estimated at 21,000, were 7,000 beyond the advanced estimate and second largest since last March 1st. Friday. Top and average prices late in the week dropped 25c at $14.50 and $12.50, respectively, the latter standing the lowest since May 3. Larger operators purchased freely on the break.

Cattle prices suffered sharp setbacks owing to an increase in the week's run and a poor demand. Receipts this week were estimated at 62,000, against 42,000 last week. Good to choice yearlings declined 15c to 25c. A similar downturn followed in choice heavies.

Grass-fed cows and heifers moved at $4.50 to $6.00. Killing operations were taxed, the dressed beef trade declined, and the country continued to neglect thin stock, these being the depressing factors the past week.

Sheep receipts were estimated at 65,000 against 61,000 last week.

Bearish pressure brought prices down, most of the lambs selling 25c to 50c lower at the close. The best lambs here this week sold at $14.40.

Cotton Erratic.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I.N.S.)—Cotton registered an erratic course the past week. Deliveries on Monday declined from 22 to 30 points on selling inspired by lower Liverpool cables and weakness in other American markets. With clearer weather in prospect, the anxiety over insect damage to the crop was relieved somewhat.

However on Tuesday advances of from 25 to 65 points were recorded on buying largely influenced by reports of heavy rains in Oklahoma and Texas. The rest of the week continued about the same as the early part.

At the close of today's short session prices were from 4 points higher to 3 lower.

Outlook For Beets In Platte Valley Very Encouraging

(Special to The Star.)

BAYARD, Neb., July 17.—Prospects for sugar beets and crops of all sort are good generally in the North Platte Valley, but it is not yet possible to forecast the success of the endeavor to beat the high record for beet production set in 1925.

With a 20,000 acre increase in the area in sugar beets this year, occasioned partly by the guarantee of $8 per ton for the 1926 crop, it is thought that it may be difficult to raise the record of 16.4 tons average set last year. Hot weather during the past few days has been forcing the crop rapidly to the front, and farmers are already reporting large beets, considering that the crop has about ten weeks yet to grow.

Grain is being cut and threshing will start within a few days. It is thought that yields of wheat, barley and oats will be highly satisfactory. The second growth of alfalfa is now being irrigated.

Charge Trustees Had No Authority To Sell Church

Charging that the board of trustees, John J. Burden, William Carr and George Butcher had no legal authority to transfer the church property of the Refuge Baptist church, a petition has been filed in District court asking that the court vacate a decree authorizing the transfer.

It is alleged that the property was transferred on July 7, 1925, to J. H. Bruce, who later deeded it to Mrs. Hattie M. Taylor and C. E. Taylor. No meeting was held to authorize the sale, it is stated, and the certificate filed in the register of deeds' office so stating is fraudulent, the petition states. When the matter came up in court the counsel for the plaintiff withdrew, leaving them without representation, and in consequence whereof they were in default, the petition sets forth, and a decree entered against them.

The petition is filed in the name of the church against J. H. Bruce, Fay Bruce, E. C. Taylor and Hattie M. Taylor.

LAMENT LACK OF RADIO CONTROL

Urges Attention to Problem During Coming Primary Elections.

Dale P. Stough, president of Lincoln Radio club, states that within the last two or three days he has began to receive complaints from radio fans that so far as this part of the U. S. is concerned some of the chaos has commenced that was predicted by those interested in securing national radio regulatory legislation before the adjournment of congress.

Within a radius of one hundred miles of Lincoln there are eight or nine major broadcasting stations. It has been contended since congress went home, in its haste to meet its constituents, that chaos might result in this field which has come to be of vital interest to many millions of users, operators, merchandisers and manufacturers of the radio.

Powell Crosley, jr., the manufacturer of a line of radios, of which there are a great many sets in operation throughout the country, when in Omaha Wednesday of this week stated that, he thought broadcasting stations which had been making use of a certain specified wave-length for any considerable of time would be able to go into the courts of this land and by injunction or other proceedings prevent, under common law rights, trespass by other stations upon their established wave-lengths.

As a lawyer, Mr. Stough calls attention to the fact that every thinking citizen knows that court actions move too slowly and especially in this recess period of the year to prevent the chaos which is about to result. Within the past few days the fans are claiming that not less than three of the ten major stations within this 100 mile radius have asserted a claim to choose higher and more desirable wave-lengths and have followed it up with action. He further states that he feels this matter will become of such instant importance to the users of radio, who may not be able to immediately establish their rights to some orderly use of the air, that every radio user in Nebraska and all other states, at every opportunity and in every manner at his command should interview and cross-examine all candidates who are seeking nomination and election to seats in congress. And immediate and forcible expression of public opinion upon this subject may result in the short term session of the present congress which convenes in December, working out some solution at that time. But we all know that the short term from December to March is in itself too brief lived to bring forth permanent solutions of any question of national scope so it will be well for the vast radio public to raise its voice in this matter while the congressional primary and general election campaigns are being carried on.

Examination May Prove McCray Too Sick For Prison

ATLANTA, Ga., July 17. — (I. N. S.)—An order for a physical examination of former Gov. Warren T. McCray of Indiana, a prisoner at the Atlanta federal penitentiary, has been received here from the department of justice in Washington, Wardn John Snook announced today. The examination will be made by an Atlanta physician and forwarded to Washington.

Snook said that there has been no new development in the efforts of the former governor to obtain a commutation of sentence, but that an examination was ordered in all cases where application for parole is made on the grounds of illness or physical disability. McCray has been suffering from high blood pressure for several months, and has been a frequent patient at the prison hospital since he was sent here.

HURT WHEN CAR GOES OFF ROAD

Washington Man, Wife and Daughter-In Law Severely Injured.

(Special to The Star.)

WASHINGTON, Kas., July 17.—William Schopp, prominent Washington Buick auto dealer, was very seriously injured, and may lose his right hand, Mrs. Schopp sustained two broken ribs and a cut across her forehead that required fifteen stitches to close, and Mrs. Martin Schopp, a daughter-in-law of the elder Schopps, was badly bruised about the body, and the big Buick car they were riding in, driven by William Schopp, was wrecked when it ran off the highway about three miles north of Washington during the night Friday and struck a big tree.

The party was driving back to Washington and it is claimed that Schopp fell asleep at the wheel and ran the car off a bridge over a deep ravine. The car remained upright going down the slope and struck a big tree in its path and was so badly telescoped that it did not turn over.

Schopp was crushed about the chest between the steering wheel and the front seat, and windshield glass cut a gash across the palm of his hand to the bones. Physicians were doubtful about saving the hand. He also sustained many bruises and minor cuts. Two small children of Mrs. Martin Schopp, riding in the rear seat were thrown out but alighted in weeds and were not injured. The party was discovered shortly after the accident and assisted to the home here by passing autoists.

MRS. M'PHERSON PUT ON DEFENSE IN JURY'S PROBE

after having started on a tour early today to a retreat near Mexicali, where a woman, said to resemble the evangelist, appeared shortly after Mrs. McPherson was reported as drowned.

Cline and Ryan announced that new developments — which they failed to disclose—had caused them to change their plans and turn back after starting for the mountain country along the international boundary.

Press Hunt for Ormiston.

STATEVILLE, N. C., July 17.—(INS)—Working on a clue uncovered today that Kenneth G. Ormiston, missing operator at the Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, was in this town late last night, North Carolina authorities tonight were conducting a statewide search for the much wanted witness in the Aimee Semple McPherson abduction probe.

The information which led to the belief that Ormiston is in North Carolina came from Mrs. L. H. Lyon of Stateville, who told police that a man answering the description of Ormiston stopped at her home last night and asked to use the telephone. He put in a long distance telephone call for the Campbell House hotel at Taylorsville, N. C., but left before his call was completed. He gave his name as Ormiston, Mrs. Lyons said, and he was traveling in a big roadster.

There have been persistent reports for several days that Ormiston was in North Carolina and a telegram was received at the Campbell hotel in Taylorsville where it is being held pending his arrival.

The manager of the hotel, however, declared that no man named Ormiston and no one answering published descriptions of the radio operator had been registered at the hotel. The contents of the telegram said to be held for Ormiston in the Taylorsville hotel have not been divulged.

EXTINGUISH FIRE IN NEW CAPITOL

terial near the blaze stood about seven feet away. This consisted of the long racks of files, all stacked paper, which would have burst into a blaze in an instant. However, little damage was done.

The building itself is fireproof and the blaze would most likely have been confined to the one room even if the files had caught fire.

The electric iron which started the blaze is used in pressing prints made on the photostat machine. C. A. Ross, who has charge of the file room was there during the afternoon, but was out of town when the fire was reported. Mrs. Ross, who said she had been in the room during the afternoon with her husband, said she was positive the iron was not in use while they were there. They left shortly after three o'clock, she said.

Governor McMullen was present when the firemen went into the room, having come across the street from the mansion when the trucks stopped at the capitol. H. G Taylor, member of the railway commission, also was at the building, but said he did not know anything regarding the fire, or who left the iron connected.

Governor McMullen praised the firemen for their quick work in extinguishing the blaze. The flames were smothered without the use of water.

Names Air Generals.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(INS)—President Coolidge has appointed Lt. Co. William E. Gilmore and Lt. Col. Frank P. Lahm to be brigadier generals in the air service, it was announced today. The appointments were made under the air service re-organization legislation passed by congress this session. Col. Gilmore is a native of Lorain, O., and Col. Lahm of Mansfield, O.

INTERBOROUGH LOSS BIG.

Coolidge Speedboat Employed In Saving 4 Boys From Lake

WHITE PINES CAMP, N. Y., July 17.—(INS)—Speedy work on the part of Lieutenant Commander Joel T. Boone, one of the presidential physicians, and three secret service men, saved four boys vacationing across the lake from the summer white house, from drowning today.

The boys, from McDougal camp, were cruising around Osgood lake in a sail boat when a sudden squall capsized them about a quarter of a mile out from the Coolidge landing.

Dr. Boone, John Fitzgerald, George Drescher and Jim Haley immediately manned the Coolidge speedboat and just managed to reach the upset boat in time to drag the boys to safety.

and at the same time gave Reilin Curtis, an inmate of the reformatory, his freedom, both on parole. Youell has served about four years on a sentence of 1 to 20 for forgery committed in Dodge county. Curtis was sentenced in March 1925, for stealing three sacks of sugar from a freight car in the Burlington yards at Lincoln. He has been in a year and four months, his maximum term being 4 years.

In July, 1922, Youell was permitted to leave the prison in order to do some work for a man who lived near by, but he took a clandestine departure and was not caught again for a year and half.

Curtis escaped from the state sheriff in the old capitol building when an officer left him alone while interviewing one of his companions in an adjoining room. He was recaptured in Omaha.

Caldwell on Freed List.

Frank Caldwell, convicted of assault with murderous intent in Sheridan county and under sentence of 1 to 5 years, whose case was heard by the pardon board in June, is now granted a parole. He had only a few months yet to serve o. his 1-to-5-year term, allowing deductions for good time.

George Allis, found guilty of stealing his wife's automobile in Lincoln after they had separated, and driving it to Omaha, gets out after spending a little over a year at the penitentiary. His sentence was 1 to 3 years.

Women Are Paroled.

Two former inmates of the women's reformatory at York, Fern Faust and Thelma Lunsford, who took French leave from that institution and were transfered to the penitentiary after being caught, are now allowed to go out. They have served a year each for breaking custody. The minimum sentence imposed on them was 2 years, but to get around that the board commuted it to 1 year and then issued the paroles.

PREPARING TO RE-OPEN BANKS

here Monday of the Bankers Trust Co., financial agent of the smaller institutions.

The closing of the Atlanta bank brought a run on several of the member banks, mank of them suspending in order to protect the funds of their depositors and conserve their assets.

Gov. M. B. Welborn of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank, was given credit for quieting much of the hysteria that gripped the countryside by reiterating his faith in the financial condition of the Georgia banks.

Although he stood ready to help the member banks, Welborn said no calls had been received for assistance.

The situation took a new turn late in the day when Comptroller Amos of Florida, according to press dispatches, branded as false reports attributing the closing of Florida banks to the shrinkage of Florida real estate paper.

Denial From Amos.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 17.—(INS.)—A flat denial that the recent Florida bank failures had been due to any "collapse" of Florida land values was contained in a statement issued here today by State Comptroller Ernest Amos on his return from Atlanta where he spent two days studying the banking conditions in the two states.

Amos' statement unqualifiedly declared that the bank failures in this state "are almost wholly confined to those system banks which had most of their reserves with the system banks of Georgia.

Briand Asks Approval.

Briand demanded that the chamber approve the delegation of power as quickly as possible, seeking to obtain the weapon of dictatorial authority in time to make use of it when the bourse opened Monday. He hoped to prevent further depreciation of the franc, which during the past week has progressed with alarming speed along the path worn by German, Austrian, Hungarian, Russian and Polish money in their fantastic descents to quotations which ran into six and seven figures to the dollar.

Defnite Break Seen.

The fierce struggle between Briand and Herriot probaly means a definite break between the two men. Speaking in the dual role of president of thet chamber and leader of the radicals, Herriot defended the rights of parliament against the dangers of dictatorship. Briand countered with a disclaimer of the charge that he sought to impose a dictatorship on France.

"I do not care what interpretation is put upon my intervention," shouted Herriot. "For a year I have supported the various governments formed to cope with the financial situation, and I would vote for you today if my conscience permitted.

"But the two short articles of the government's projects sorely wound the consciences of all republicans. They torment many persons in this chamber.

"I address to you, M. Premier a pressing appeal not to seek to strip the parliament of its constitutional rights. I fought for the powers which were granted to Poincare during his premiership, but they were unimportant by the side of what you are asking of the deputies."

Noting that Briand was smiling, Herriot cried:

"Don't jeer me."

Briand Becomes Furious.

Briand was furious in an instant.

"What prompted you to say that I was jeering you?" he demanded.

"We republicans are uneasy," continued Herriot. "For we are hearing rumors of a dictatorship; that Caillaux wants to readjust the taxes for 1927 and that when the period of full powers expires there would be taxes which parliament had not accepted. I refuse to give my consent to this."

Briand replied calmly: "I feel the ardent desire of the country necessitates the action."

Deputy Marin arose to attack to the government and when he had concluded, Andre Tardieu, protege of Georges Clemenceau, arose clutching a paper which proved to deal with Caillaux's plans to establish a dictatorship during the war. He read from the paper, explaining it was the "Rubigon document," discovered in Florence during the war, when Caillaux had set down his scheme for a coup d'etat.

After the debate was over a vote was taken.

A Gloomy Outlook.

The real situation in France tonight was well indicated by the gloomy faces of the members of Briand's tenth ministry who left the Elysee palace after delivering their resignation to Douumergue. A few of the ministers attempted to smile, but most of them reflected in their faces their serious thoughts on the plight of France.

This final upset of the plans, which for years have been going on to solve the financial problem of France, tomorrow probably will prove to be the turning point, but whether to a better or a worse future remains to be seen.

Anything may happen now, but the most promising solution would be to dissolve the parliament and thereby enable France to elect a parliament which would provide a stable majority for the new cabinet. The crisis really arises from a political impasse rather than from any inherent economic difficulties, but if the impasse continues the results will be as though France were an impoverished, bankrupt county. Of course, there is the possibility of a dictatorship established by force, but there is no indication of that so far.

Briand seems to have eliminated himself from the picture. As he left the palace he said:

"I don't suppose you think I would return to power again; that I would succeed myself. I already am disappointed enough. I cannot live in this constant hostility and now that I have my liberty I am going to use it."

Joseph Caillaux was as disappointed as ever in the face of defeat for his plan to make himself financial dictator of France. His plans seems to have gone entirely into an eclipse.

Mme. Caillaux awaited her husband in an automobile as the Elysee. Caillaux sauntered out, fidding with his monocle and twirling his cane, declaring in his squeaky voice:

"No one is happier than I am."

Mellon Answers Peabody.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(U. P.)—Opposition of the Coolidge administration to cancellation of the allied war debts on legal, equitable or charitable grounds, was voiced tonight in a letter from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to Frederick W. Peabody, replying to a letter from Peabody to President Coolidge, urging cancellation.

England is not on the "edge of destruction," and Mellon believes Europe today is closer to a "permanent sound solution of its economic troubles than at any time since the war," according to the letter, made public here twelve hours after Mellon sailed for Europe and three hours after the Briand government fell in Paris.

England is "most sound of heart, as its recent solution of a strike has shown to all," Mellon's letter said.

"Other countries are in monetary difficulties but the acuteness of the disease has brought a clear understanding of the causes and of the proper remedies. . . . I do not despair of Europe."

Peabody, a lawyer, in his letter to President Coolidge, argued for cancellation of the $12,000,000,000 of allied debts on legal, equitable and charitable grounds, according to Mellon's answer.

Holds Money Loaned.

There is no wording of law to show the money was given, not loaned, Mellon said. In reply to the "charity" argument, Mellon said the debt commission and congress were merely trustees for the American people who contributed the money loaned, and he added that "neither generally from the people, not in the press, nor at all from the chosen representatives of the people in congress has come any demand for cancellation."

Mellon assured Peabody that the reparations receivable from Germany by Belgium, France and Italy are more than the payments these nations have agreed to pay both the United States and to England.

"I have, as have you, and every other good citizen, a profound sympathy for the countries suffering from the after results of the great war, which we in America have to a large extent escaped. But I feel that a recognition of their external obligations by the European nations and an undertaking bravely to meet them within their capacity, as each country has done, is a moral force of great service to permanent prosperity in the world."

CONFESSES TO SHOOTING OF A LUMBER MAN

again as you have. I am going to kill you."

Nutt said Norris ordered the man out of the office and the pastor returned to his desk.

"Chipps then returned and confronted Norris." Nutt said, and said: 'all right, let's go to it'."

That was all he knew, Nutt said, except that he heard one shot.

Norris made bond immediately after the filing of the charges and waived preliminary hearing. He will go to trial sometime next week.

The bond was signed by thirty business men, mostly members of his church.

Clashes With Officials.

The shooting is believed to have been resulted of a "war" between the Baptist pastor and city officials. It started several months ago after Dr. Norris built a platform on the grounds of a local high school, from which he intending holding evangelistic meetings. School officials ordered Norris to remove his platform and not until city officials interferred by removing it with armed guards did the paster give up his efforts to hold the meeting.

Several weeks ago the city announced purchases of a large stone building owned by the Catholic church which projected into a street. The purchase was made, city officials said, for the purpose of widening the street. Norris charged that the purchase price was excessive and that it was made in order to benefit Mayor Meacham, who owns a large department store on the street.

Court action was brought to restrain the city from purchasing the property. It was charged that Dr. Norris was behind the suit.

Norris in a sermon last Sunday charged that the Meacham company discharged several of its employes because they admitted membership to his church. Norris called the former employes to his pulpit during his sermon and asked them why they were discharged, they replied, Norris said, that they were given their choice, either to quit the church or to quit their jobs.

Attacked City Management.

FORT WORTH, Tex., July 17.—(I. N. S.)—D. E. Chipps, lumberman of this city, was shot and almost instantly killed here late this afternoon. Rev. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist church of Fort Worth and well known throughout the country, surrendered to authorities immediately after the shooting.

The shooting occurred about 5 o'clock and took place at Rev. Mr. Norris' church on a downtown street. Chipps had gone to the church to see Norris and the shooting is said to have followed.

The pastor recently has drawn ire of numerous citizens through his attacks upon the city management.

The city recently announced the purchase of the property of a Catholic church to be used in widening a street.

Purchase Opposed.

Legal proceedings were brought against the city to prohibit the purchase of a church site. City officials charged that Norris was behind the suit.

One large department store owned by H. C. Meacham, mayor, recently discharged several employes who were said to be members of Norris' church, the pastor charged in a recent sermon.

After reaching the courthouse Norris immediately went into conference with the district attorney.

CANTON SLAYERS STILL AT LARGE

authorities met with a group of Canton citizens here tonight to lay plans for a separate investigation of the Don R. Mellett slaying.

The body of the young Canton Daily News publisher who was shot down in his own back yard early yesterday was enroute to Indianapolis, Ind., for burial following brief service here.

Promoters of tonight's meeting hoped to bring about an understanding between the various elements represented to join their separate efforts to solve the crime and later to clean up conditions in the city's notorious underworld where the plot against Mellett's life is believed to have originated.

The meeting was held in the office of County Prosecutor C. B. McClintock, it was unofficially announced, and it was said its origin was vague. Results of its decisions are expected to be significant in the future course of Canton's affairs. It was the opinion of those most anxious to avenge Mellett's death that Chief of Police C. A. Lengle, one of the men whom the Daily News had opposed and whose $50,000 libel suit against the newspaper is pending, is not the man to direct search for the assassins.

Brother Comments.

"In every other city, every thug, gunman and crook would have been rounded up before now. But in the city where thugs and crooks make their headquarters, that is too much to expect," said Lloyd Mellett, brother of the murdered man and city editor of the Daily News, shortly before his departure for Indianapolis.

"The blood is on the hands of men who live here in Canton, who are known by name at least to practically every citizen in Canton. It is these men who must be brought to justice whether the tools they hired to do their work are ever found or not."

City officials over the chief of police have until now taken the stand that Lengle should be given a fair chance to get results. But after two days with apparently no progress it is considered likely that another arrangement will be made as Safety Director Hexamer promised if Lengle failed.

Chief Orders Roundup.

Chief Lengle tonight issued an order for a roundup of all underworld characters and suspicious persons in the city.

"We have run down countless tips on strange automobiles and will start bringing in underworld leaders for quizzing," said Lengle. "We have not been idle in this respect and have grilled many persons but this has been done at their own places of business or homes. I want them brought to headquarters now where we can sweat them."

$25,000 rewards were posted today and the fund is expected to be increased to $50,000 if the murderers are not taken within the next few days. This has attracted a small army of private detectives, among whom are some of the most famous in the country.

Ora Slayter, the man who solved the Nesbitt murder at Troy, Ohio, arrived this afternoon. He was hired by the Scripps-Howard newspapers to work on the case. Other well known operatives are under consideration in case the city prosecutor is granted $5,000 with which to engage special investigators C. H. Sissen, personal investigator for Governor Donahey, was reported to have arrived early this morning but had not been located this evening. He is said to have to be remaining under cover to make his preliminary observations.

Two Movie Houses At Beatrice Sold

(Special to The Star.)

BEATRICE, Neb., July 17.—Announcement of the sale of the Gilbert and Rialto movie thaters by Blaine Cook to the Beatrice Theatre and Realty company, a branch of the Universal corporation, was made Saturday afternoon. George Monroe of Omaha assumed charge of the theaters at the close of Saturday evening's performances. He will be assisted by his son, George, jr., in the management of the houses. The company which takes over the two theaters is contructing the new Tivoli theater just west of the Paddock hotel block.

Mr. Cook will continue to operate his string of theaters at York, and North Platte, Neb., and Holten, Kas. He will make his home in Beatrice for the present.

SPEED STATUTE BEING ENFORCED

30 miles per hour when passing the teachers' college, in the heart of the city. He was assessed $10 and costs.

The average sped of those charged with violating the state law exceeded 50 miles per hour. Five were doing better than 60, three others hit 70 and one daring driver forced his speedometer up to 80 miles per in his anxiety to cross the county line before the pursuing officers overtook him.

The tendency of the courts has been one of leniency. In fact, records show that possible fines and punishment were suspended in many cases where mitigating circumstances entered. They were considered, for tourist and local driver alike.

Refuse to Recall Patrol.

Protests of the Omaha and Lincoln auto clubs, coupled with threats that they will not route auto traffic through Buffalo county if efforts are made here to enforce the law, failed to result in recalling the highway patrol. Twenty foot signs, warning autoists that the state speed law is being enforced in this county, are conspicuously located along the Lincoln highway and other federal and state aid roads.

"Enforce or repeal the law," was the manner in which Sheriff Parr dismissed the case, although he stood ready to abide by an order of the county board, to call off the highway patrol, if so desired.

"It is just as important to enforce this law as it is to prosecute violators of the Volstead act or those charged with violation of any criminal statute," the county attorney stated. "If Nebraskans do not want this law enforced, then it should be repealed."

Thirty-six miles of all graveled highway across the county, the Lincoln highway, is a temptation to tourists, it is admitted. The fact that a number of fatalities have occurred on this stretch of road this year and the frequency of fatal accidents lately, all due to speeding, was in great measure responsible for the action of the county board in putting a highway patrolman on the job.

IN THE LEAD

Fisher's engineering experts—skilled beyond their calling by virtue of years of continuous research and experimentation with all types of body construction—unhesitatingly aver that none but Body by Fisher—exclusively used by General Motors for Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac cars—affords the essential virtue of safety, beauty and comfort which characterize every Fisher product. Quite logically the public knows that when any improvement which really gives an enhanced measure of safety, comfort and luxury is perfected, Fisher will be the first to present it just as Fisher has created and been the first to present every important improvement in body design and construction of the past decade.

New Triumphs of Oldsmobile Engineers In Latest Model

The progressive developments of Oldsmobile engineers during the past year and the new values that are being offered in Oldsmobile for the coming year that result from the manufacturing economies and savings of the most successful year in Oldsmobile history being passed back to the buying public, are being displayed throughout the country for the first time in the new series "E" Oldsmobile.

The new Series "E" Oldsmobile six incorporates in its latest appointments and specifications many new features of recognized worth and improvements of demonstrated value. The results of the changes in this car are added power, longer life, smoother performance, new features of driving ease and security, better operating economy, and new body features and appointments.

One new body type is on display in the Oldsmobile series "E" line—a landau. Other body types in the line remain the same, including the standard and deluxe touring, deluxe roadster, standard an ddeluxe coupe, standard and deluxe coach and the standard and deluxe sedan,—a total of ten including the landau. No change has been made in the standard Oldsmobile prices.

Added power has been given Oldsmobile by increasing the cylinder bore from 2 3-4 to 2 7-8 inches with a resulting increase in cubic displacement from 169 to 185 cubic inches, a slight change in the tapered, dome-shaped combustion chamber and a new hot section high velocity design of manifold.

Improvements vital to the longer life and operating economy of the engine have been made with the introduction of crancase ventilation, dual-air cleaning, and oil filter and an entirely new design of "two-way" cooling system.

All these improvements increase the operating efficiency of the Oldsmobile and prolong its engine life.

The use of the harmonic balancer on the series "E" Oldsmobile is also announced. This balancer, a development by General Motors, counteracts engine vibration.

Chromium plating, recently announced as an exclusive Oldsmobile method of plating, is also among the prominent features of this car. Chromium plating has a more durable, more corrosion-proof, harder, and more permanent lustre surface than former types of plating. This feature has recently been the point of considerable commendation throughout the leading technical publications of the automotive industry as a redical advancement in automotive methods.

A marked advance in motor car design evidences itself in Oldsmobile's new crankcase ventilation system. With this new feature of design Oldsmobile engineers have been successful in combating one of the oldest problems of the industry,—crankcase dilution.

In all internal combustion engines water is formed by condensation. Cold engines do not burn all of the fuel on starting. This water and unburned liquid fuel pass into the crankcase and form what is known as crankcase dilution. Crankcase dilution is injurious to the lubricating qualities of the oil and result in shorter engine life.

In this new series "E" Oldsmobile one third of the air that passes through the carburetor on the right side of the engine is drawn in through a breather port on the left side of the crankcase. This air circulates through the crankcase and takes off with it the unburned fuel and water in the crankcase and in that manner eliminates excessive dilution with resulting longer useful life of the oil and longer engine life. A part of the oil vapor in the crankcase is drawn into the combustion chambers and improves the lubrication of the tops of pistons, valves and upper cylinder walls.

Dual Aid Cleaning.

Road dust and dirt form an abrasive element in engines and consequent wear. The new Oldsmobile has dual air cleaning. The master air cleaner is back of the carburetor and cleans two-thirds of the air as it enters the carburetor direct, while the second air cleaner is on the breather port in connection with crankcase ventilation. Both cleaners are of the centrifugal type.

The new series Oldsmobile has a "two-way" cooling system and follows a new practice in design and operation. This new cooling system embodies the best features of the two accepted manners of cooling, pressure type cooling and thermo-siphon type cooling. Even temperature control of cooling has been a problem of automotive engineers for some time. Valves, valve seats, spark plugs and combustion chambers heat faster than do cylinder walls and not until this new Oldsmobile design cooling system was announced had any successful methods of cooling the points of greatest heat sufficient without cooling the cylinder walls too much for efficient operation, been developed. At the points where greatest heat is generated, pressure-driven water is circulated through a manifold type passage. This full flow of water about the cylinders would cool them too much. Therefore the circulation of water about the cylinders has been restricted and retarded by the use of thermo-siphon type action, in which the rate of circulation is largely governed by the reaction of the heat to be dissipated upon the cooling water. These combined types of cooling in the "two-way" system cool efficiently the parts of greatest heat and maintains sufficient warmth about the cylinder walls for even and efficient operating temperature throughout the entire engine. This advanced type of cooling contributes materially to added power, longer life and smoother performance of the new series Oldsmobile.

A new high velocity, hot section manifold is a part of the improved design in the new Oldsmobile. This design retains the high velocity given the incoming gases as they leave the carburetor and pass on into the combustion chambers. An improved jacketing of the inlet manifold is affected in the vertical section above the carburetor and assists in more complete evaporization of the fuel. The inlet manifold and heated by it, retained the highly explosive state of incoming gases. This new design contributes to the still smoother performance of this new Oldsmobile and to its greater operating economy.

An oil filter has been added to the new series Oldsmobile. This filter prolongs the life of the engine and the longer useful life of the lubricating oil. Sediment and foreign substance are removed as the oil passes through the filter and filter bag from the rear camshaft bearing. Should the filter bag become clogged with sediment, without knowledge to the driver, the lubricating system functions in the normal manner, there being no danger of shutting off or the supply of lubricant. All principle parts are pressure lubricated.

An important factor in contributing to the still smoother performance of the new series "E" Oldsmobile is the reduction i nthe rear axle gear ratio to 4.73 to 1. Through this improvement fewer revolutions of the engine are required to drive the car a given distance. Normally a reduction gear ratio means a loss of power but this change in the new Oldsmobile does not require a sacrifice of power because the added power derived from the enlarged engine and other improvements leaves a new surplus after the change in gear ratio.

The center main bearing that supports the balanced crankshaft has been made more rigid and stronger to provide still smoother performance Other improvements such as a slight change in the contour of the cams, double valve springs such as used in aircraft and racing cars, contribute materially to added power, longer life and still smoother performance.

Thermostatic control of the charging rate of the generator is a new feature of this improved Oldsmobile. Charging rate automatically increases when the engine is cold and decreases as the temperature becomes higher. The spark control remains full automatic.

A new ventilation of the clutch housing that affects a cooler running clutch; the increased torque of the starting motor; a new type of longer life clutch with more and larger bearings are other important improvements.

This new series Oldsmobile represents marked advancement without basic change in design in the car that has proven popular during the past year.

While no drastic changes have been made in the outward appearance of the latest Oldsmobile refinements have greatly added to its appearance and to the comfort and convenience of driver and passengers.

The more massive lines given by the raising and broadening of the radiator shell are further emphasized by new heavy full crown fenders equipped with larger skirts. These new fenders and skirts not only further beautify the cars, but also reduce the splash of water on the car body and windshield.

The new two-filament headlight bulbs are being used on all models. These elimnate the dangers of night driving by providing non-glare full illumination close to the car when in the "dim" position, and the same bright light but thrown forward on the road when on "bright." As an additional safety factor, the light control is placed at the steering wheel center. This permits the driver to operate the lights, off, on, bright, dim or parking, without removing hands from the wheel.

Indirect lighting is a feature of the new walnut finished instrument panel by which all the instruments, artistically grouped, are individualy and indirectly illuminated at night without glare. The instruments include, beside the conventional speedometer, oil guage and ameter, a fuel gauge, a carburetor choke button and a combination ignition switch and lock.

This latter is of entirely new design and is positive locking. The ignition lock must be released and the key removed before the switch can be turned on. When the ignition is turned off the ignition automatically is locked. The coil is built with the lock integral and is built in a steel case on the back of the instrument panel instead of at the side of the engine. This prevents a thief wiring around the lock.

Additional beauty has been given the bodies of the closed models. Rear seat cushions have been lowered 1 3-4 inches to increase headroom. This has been made possible by removing the tool compartment from under the rear seat to under the front seat, where they are more accessible to the driver.

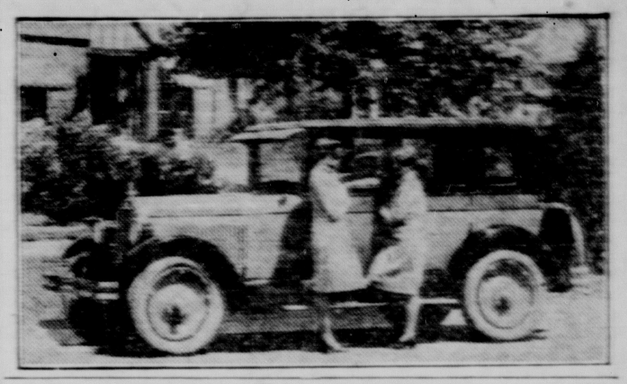

All closed models except the new landau are finished in a durable and beautiful genuine mohair of taupe shade. The landau is upholstered in genuine grey mohair. High grade rugs and rubber mats are used on the floors, and the new metal fittings are of exclusive design in satin nickel. Combination match and ash receptacles are set in the back of the front seat in sedan and landau models and on the right side of coach models.

Duco finish is used on all models. The touring and de luxe touring are Russian brown on the lower portion and moleskin grey on the upper above the molding, which is black. The striping is red. The de luxe roadster has sea fog grey on the lower portion and ocean blue above the black molding and burnt orange striping.

Coupe and de luxe coupe are Dugestan blue up to the black molding, black above and are striped in ivory with a fabricoid covering over the metal sheathed rear quarters with landau bars. The coach and de luxe coach have the lower portion finished in Buckingham grey with pistachio green striping. The upper is black. The sedan and de luxe sedan are aqua-marine blue below the molding and black above with ivory striping.

The new landau sedan is finished in sea fog grey up to the lower molding, ocean blue between the lower and upper molding and a saddle over the hood and cowl, and black above. Burnt orange striping is used. The rear quarter is finished in black fabricoid over metal sheathing and is equipped with landau bars.

PRODUCT of GENERAL MOTORS

ADDED POWER .·. LONGER LIFE SMOOTHER PERFORMANCE

Enlarged Engine Enlarged in the bore of the cylinders from 2¾ inches to 2 7/8 inches, increasing its displacement from 169 cubic inches to 185 cubic inches.

Dual Air Cleaning In this new Oldsmobile, a master air cleaner eliminates the injurious particles from two-thirds of the air before it enters the carburetor directly—while the second cleaner, in connection with crankcase ventilation, cleans the balance of the air.

Crankcase Ventilation In all internal combustion engines water is formed by condensation. Cold engines do not burn all of the fuel on starting. This water and liquid fuel pass into the crankcase and form crankcase dilution.

Excessive dilution is eliminated by crankcase ventilation. Air, drawn through the second cleaner into the crankcase, takes off water vapor and unburned fuel that may have passed into the crankcase. Crankcase ventilation improves performance and gives longer life to the engine and longer useful life to the oil.

Oil Filter An oil filter has been added to this Oldsmobile, prolonging still more the life of the engine and the useful life of the oil. Should the filter become clogged with sediment, the lubricating system functions in the common manner. All principle parts are pressure lubricated.

Harmonic Balancer The Harmonic Balancer, developed by General Motors engineers, counteracts vibration and gives Oldsmobile a smoothness you will quickly recognize when you take the wheel.

High Velocity Hot Section Manifold An improved jacketing of the intake manifold by the heated exhaust manifold is effected in the vertical section of the intake passage above the carburetor. The intake manifold, being above the exhaust manifold and heated by it, retains the highly explosive state of incoming gases.

Stronger Center Bearing The center main bearing that supports the balanced crankshaft has been made more rigid and stronger to provide still smoother performance in this Oldsmobile.

New Axle Ratio The gear ratio of the rear axle has been reduced to 4.73 to 1. This contributes to smoother performance in that fewer revolutions of the engine are required to drive the car a given distance, while the enlarged engine leaves a new surplus of power even after the change in gear ratio.

Dome Shaped Combustion Chambers A slight change in the contour of the combustion chambers gives greater turbulence to the incoming gases. This change produces smoother engine performance and contributes materially to surplus power.

Two-Way Cooling Now Oldsmobile offers "two-way" cooling, which incorporates the best features of the two accepted types—pressure cooling and thermo-siphon cooling. Parts at the points of greatest heat are cooled by the manifold method of circulation, while the slower thermo-siphon type of action, in which the rate of circulation is largely governed by the reaction of heat upon the water, maintains about the cylinders sufficient warmth for efficient operation. Here is a new type of cooling design, incorporating the best features of all past engineering practice in even temperature cooling control.

Other Improvements Other changes, contributing added power, longer life and smoother performance, form a long list of features, such as slight change of cam contour, double valve springs as in aircraft and racing car engines—and others equally important.

GREATER ECONOMY

Manifold Design The manifold design also improves the operating economy of the Oldsmobile Series "E." On the General Motors Proving Ground, this car established new records for Oldsmobile operating economy.

Other Economy Features The dual air cleaning, the crankcase ventilation, the "two-way" cooling and other features that are attributes of longer life, power efficiency and smoothness, are also factors of operating economy.

ADDED EASE AND SECURITY

Thermostatic Charging Control Oldsmobile now has thermostatic control on the generator, automatically increasing the charging rate when the engine is cold and decreasing the charging rate as the temperature rises. The spark control is full automatic.

Twin-Beam Light Control Head lamps have double-filament bulbs, one filament for "bright action" and one for "dim action." On "dim action" the light is bright but thrown at a downward angle that protects the oncoming driver and gives ample vision to the Oldsmobile driver.

Steering Wheel Light Control The twin-beam Oldsmobile headlights are operated without the driver shifting his position, as the light control switch is a nest lever, exactly like the hand throttle, centered on the steering wheel.

Instruments Indirectly Illuminated From behind the glass face of each instrument in the unit-grouped dash panel, an indirect light glows whenever any of the lights are lighted, illuminating each instrument without glare or reflection in the driver's eyes.

Instrument Panel Fuel Guage The new grouping of the instruments on the dash is a noticeable improvement. A reliable instrument board fuel gauge, now standard on all Oldsmobile body types, accurately indicates the supply of gasoline.

Thief-Proof Car Lock A new design in thief-proof car locks is a feature of this Oldsmobile. With this thief-proof control the engine cannot be started when the key is left in the lock. Turning off the ignition positively locks the car and reduces the hazard of thieves who commonly "cut over" on other types of locks, for switch and coil are built integral in a vault-like steel housing. The ignition key also operates the door locks.

FINER APPOINTMENTS

Interior Features Only seeing can give you a real appreciation of this truly fine car. New upholstery, new satin nickel fittings of period design, quick-acting window lifts, large interior door handles, V. V. windshield, instruments unit-grouped in a walnut panel and centered on satin finish black instrument board, walnut steering wheel, heavy rug and rubber mat floor coverings, deep spring-cushioned seats at angles of greatest comfort, and many features that form an imposing list.

ADDED BEAUTY

Can't Bar Third Candidate.—The state legal department has advised County Superintendent Rose D. North of Lincoln county, in response to her inquiry, that there is no legal way to keep the name of a candidate for that office from being printed on the non-political primary ballot, or from receiving the nomination if such candidate obtain a sufficient number of votes in the primary. Miss North suggested that two candidates for county superintendent had filed, besides herself, and that one of them holds no certificate as a teacher. She wanted to know if the unqualified person could run for the office and perhaps crowd out one who is qualified. Assistant Attorney General Ayres thinks anybody may run but nobody, even though nominated and elected, could take the office unless she possessed the qualications specified by statute.

PREPARING FOR ILLINOIS FUNDS INVESTIGATION

Subpoenas For Eight Witnesses Delivered To Chicago District Attorney

Senate Committee Ready To Begin Its Campaign Inquiry On July 26.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 17.—(U.P.)—Preparations for the resumption of its investigation here July 26 to run down rumors and reports that several million dollars were spent in the Illinois senatorial primary last April, were made today by the senate campaign expenditures committee.

Subpoenas for eight witnesses were delivered to United States District Attorney Edwin A. Olson and arrangements completed for holding sessions of the committee in the federal building.

At Olson's direction, United States Marshal Palmer Anderson turned the subpoenas over to eight deputies for service. Another batch of subpoenas are expected next week and the committee is likely to issue more as the probe proceeds. As developments come it will probably be necessary to call in additional wittnesses from time to time to get a complete story of contributions and expenditures in the compaign.

To Withhold Names.

In making known the list of witnesses for whom subpoenas were issued, the committee departed from a policy set during its inquiry into expenditures of the Pennsylvania primary. After vaguely hinting that witnesses were "getting together" before taking the stand, the committee announced that in the future the names of those summoned for testimony would be withheld until they took the witness stand.

The subpoenas now being served by Anderson's deputies are returnable July 26, the date set for the re-opening of the investigation, and call for the appearance of the following persons:

Col. Frank L. Smith, successful republican primary candidate; George E. Brennan, democratic choice for the senate; Charles V. Barrett, republican member of the board of review and a leader of the Crowe, state's attorney and politicl partner of Barrett; Roy O. West, state republican committeemtn; Edwin H. Wright, former head of the Illinois Federation of Labor; William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago; Samuel Insull, utility magnate whose name has been linked with whisperings of a huge slush fund employed by Smith in his campaign against Senator William B. McKinley.

Moore Not Yet Called.

The committee caused considerable speculation by not summoning former Representative Allen Moore, Smith's campaign manager in the first group of witnesses. In telling the senate of reports of excessive expenditures in the Illinois primary, Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, said it was charged that Moore administered the fund which was supposed to have been raised in Smith's behalf.

Before the committee concludes here it is expected that Charles S. Deneen, Illinois; republican Senator McKinley; Homer Galpin, chairman of the republican state committee; and Albert Lasker, former chairman of the United States board, will be called.

Hagenbeck-Wallace Cricus Comes To Lincoln July 29

Gigantic Indian elephants, the largest in captivity, will form an interesting part of the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallac circus when it comes to Lincoln for two performances, afternoon and night, Thursday, July 29. As an added feature there will be presented Cheyenne Bill's Wild West show.

Cheerful Gardner, master trainer, has devoted four years to giving the Hagenzeck-Wallace elephants a post-graduate course and today they are the fatest working of all elephant actors. They have remarkable routines, including the latest dances, even the Charleston. Mr. Gardner engages a small band during practice hours at the Peru, Indiana, winter quarters, and this is evident, as his animals always work with the music and keep constantly in step.

During 1926, Hagenbeck-Wallace announce, there will be no street parades. This is due to traffic congestion in all the big cities where the circus annually appears and also the desire to retain high-class performers, who absolutely refuse to parade.

Bennett J. Doty May Be Released After Short Term

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(I. N.S.)—Although Bennett J. Doty, the Tennessee youth who joined the French Foreign Legion, has been sentenced to eight years at hard labor for desertion, the belief prevailed in Washington today that he will never serve it.

Diplomatic efforts to obtain an amelioration of the sentence will be made, it is understood, as soon as Doty has served a part of his sentence, and they probably will be successful.

Doty himself will take an appeal from the sentence to the ministry of war, according to advices received here from James H. Keeley, jr., American vice counsul at Damascus.

PLAN ARREST IN DEATH OF GIRL

Second Doctor Sought In Connection With Edith Greene Case.

BOSTON, July 17.—(U. P.)—A warrant for the arrest of Dr. Leo Hanson, backbay physician, was issued here late today, in connection with the death of Miss Edith Louise Greene, 18-year-old hospital attache.

The warrant, issued at the request of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, charges Hanson with being an accessory after the fact to the illegal operation that proved fatal to the young woman. Detectives were immediately sent from the district attorney's office in search of the backbay doctor.

Five arrests already have been made since Miss Greene's dismembered body was discovered early Tuesday in two carboard boxes and a burlap bag near a mattapan cemetery.

Dr. Thomas E. Walsh of the south end district, was still in prison awaiting action of the court Monday. His wife, Marion, who was arrested with him, had been freed under $2,000 bond.

Dr. Walsh in Custody.

BOSTON, July 17.—(INS)—With Dr. Thomas E. Walsh, 48, in custody and trying to raise $15,000 bond to obtain his release, and his wife, Mrs. Thomas E. Walsh, 28, at liberty in $2,000 bail, authorities today sought two more unnamed persons in connection with the death of Edith Louise Greene, 18, whose dismembered body was found in Mattapan.

Dr. Walsh, charged with illegal surgery, and his wife, accused of being an accessory before the fact in indictments returned by a special grand jury, surrendered to police following a three-day search for the couple.

Strikers Not To Work Until New Union Recognized

NEW YORK, July 17.—(I.N.S.)—Hopes for early settlement of the subway strike were darkened today when leaders of the strikers denied that any peace overtures were being made to the Interborough. They said that the men would not go back to work until the I. R. T., recognized the newly organized Consolidated Railway Workers union.

Frank L. Quackenbush, I. R. T. counsel, replied that the company could not consider that organization.

Service to Brooklyn, discontinued since the beginning of the strike, will be resumed before midnight, according to the company statement, which added that the subway was now on an 86½ per cent normal basis.

Complete restoration of full speed express service on the west side subways beginning Monday morning was announced by Frank Hedley, president of the I. R. T.

Hedley said that all trains would be operated by experienced motormen.

ENGINEER BACK FROM AUSTRALIA

W. H. Sawyer of St. Louis Makes Survey Of Public Utilities.

Held Only Royal Commission Of Its Kind Ever Granted An American.

W. H. Sawyer, a graduate of the University of Nebraska in 1904 and a brother of E. B. Sawyer and Proctor Sawyer of this city, has just returned to his home at St. Louis after a five month's survey of public utilities in Australia.

Mr. Sawyer has been in the employment of the General Electric company, the North American company and other electrical companies in this company and is now president of the East St. Louis and Suburban Railway company. Together with a St. Louis engineer he studied electrical and other transportation problems in the State of Victoria and made a report to the Australian government the first of June. The investigation was made under a royal commission granted by the king of England—the only such commission, so far as known, that ever has been granted to an American citizen.

After studying the government owned utilities in Australia for five months Mr. Sawyer reached the conclusion that privately operated utilities are to be preferred. However he found conditions in many of the state and municipal governments there that were an improvement over affairs in this country.

The two main objections Mr. Sawyer found to the government owned utilities in Victoria were that the system did not furnish the proper incentive to the persons in charge of them and that there could be no appeal from the government methods if the proper service was not afforded.

In his report to the Australian government Mr. Sawyer held that the undertaking of the state of Victoria of furnishing electrical power to all the state was economically sound. He recommended that the government permit more complete and frank publicity of the affairs of its public utilities, especially as to finances.

BIG WHEAT CROP BEING GATHERED

Yield In Western Nebraska Exceeds All Expectations.

Cheyenne County Alone to Have Five Million Bushels.

(Special to The Star.)

ALLIANCE, Neb., July 17.—Box Butte county's million dollar wheat crop is ready for the sickle and many acres of the golden grain are already being harvested. On many farms the large labor-saving combines are mowing down the wheat and turning it out completely threshed and ready to be hauled to market. The areas where the harvest has already gotten under way are in the vicinity of Hemingford and Berea.

Quite a number of farmers who started cutting this week found the grain a little too green and decided to wait a few days longer. The middle of next week will see the harvest going on in full blast. The recent rains also caused a delay in harvest operations.

About thirty combines which were sold by local dealers are working splendidly and are covering much ground each day. Each combine is harvesting and threshing 50 acres a day.

It is estimated that over a million dollars worth of wheat will be produced in this county. With twice the acreage of wheat as last year Box Butte county is beginning to witness its largest harvest in the history of this section. Over 20,000 acres of virgin land has been broken during the past year.

Yields this year are beyond expectations. The average so far seems to be about 26 bushels to the acre, although many fields are producing a much higher yield than that. Art Carroll near Hemingford has 1,300 acres that are turning out very well. A 700-acre tract will yield 45 bushels per acre and another piece consisting of 600 acres will make over 25.

Agricultural experts find that the wheat of this section this year is of the best quality of any ever raised in this county. It is testing very high, reaching 61 pounds per bushel and also has a very high protein test.

Smith and Perry, of near Berea, are harvesting 400 acres with a new combine and getting 30 bushels to the acre. Stenberg and Nielson, living about seven miles northwest of Alliance, are obtaining the very satisfactory yield of 32 bushels on each of their 800 acres.

Knox and Stauffacher, five miles south of Hemingford, have combines at work in their fields, which are turning out 34 bushels per acre. The spring wheat will not be ready for cutting until about two weeks, but everyone with fall wheat will be harvesting it by next ednesday or Thursday.

Farm hands, who swarmed into Alliance the fore part of the week from every direction, are getting places to work. The arrival of most of them was premature because of the delays due to rain.

In Cheyenne County.

(Special to The Star.)

SIDNEY, Neb., July 17.—Late reports from the harvest fields of western Nebraska indicate that the yield of wheat is going to exceed all previous estimates by from 5 to 20 bushels per acre. In Cheyenne county the harvest from 160,000 acres will bring a total exceeding 5,000,000 bushels and in the surrounding counties the yield is correspondingly large. On the north table wheat is running as high as 60 bushels to the acre and there are probably 20,000 acres in that section along that will hang up a new wheat record.

Corn will be an enormous crop and oats will be the best crop ever harvested. Some sections devoted to corn and oats show stands never before seen in this end of the state. It is common to see oats as high as a tall man's shoulders and the tops are exceedingly heavy. All small crops in western Nebraska are proving larger than estimated ten days ago.

Jaw Penetrated By Tine Of Pitchfork

(Special to The Star.)

CRETE, Neb., July 17.—When a hayrack on which Albert Hler was driving across his field near here Friday afternoon collapsed, he was thrown forward against the time of a pitchfork, which penetrated his jaw under the chin and came out by the side of the nose.

Mr. Hler was otherwise bruised and injured and a doctor, who was hurriedly called, dressed the wound and administered anti-tetanus serum.

POLICE CHIEF QUITS.

(Special to The Star.)

ALLIANCE, Neb., July 17.—F. W. Patterson, who has served the city as chief of police since February, 1925, has resigned to take a position with the Burlington railroad. City officials were reluctant to have him leave, but Mr. Patterson is obtaining a much better job. He is being succeeded by Officer L. M. Horton, who has been on the force for two years. Horton's place will be taken by Harold Jeffreys.

MEMORIAL FOR ALL WAR HEROES

Box Butte County To Erect Monument On Court House Grounds.

(Special to The Star.)

ALLIANCE, Neb., July 17.—Over ten per cent of the voters of Box Butte county have signed and presented to the county commissioners a petition asking that a monument be erected on the court house lawn commemorating the services of the soldiers and sailors of the Civil, Spanish-American and World wars. The proposed memorial would cost $5,500.

The commissioners Friday passed a resolution providing for the levy of a tax to pay for the memorial. The general features and plan of the memorial will be a monument surmounted with a statue, the base to be of gray granite. It will be about six feet square and upon a reinforced concrete base, approximately six feet deep.

Two bronze fountains and three bronze memorial tablets will be upo nthe sides of the base. The tablet on one side will commemorate the services of the soldiers and sailors of the Civil war. The tablet on the opposite side will commemorate the services of the Spanish-American war and the third tablet will bear the names of the soldiers and sailors who enlisted from Box Butte county and served in the world war.

The statue will be in bronze and six and a half feet in height. It will represent a standing soldier in uniform with a campaign hat and holding a gun and bayonet. It will rest upon a bronze base.

WESTCOTT TELLS ABOUT SCHOOLS

Candidate Opposes Centralization and Cabinet Member at Washington.

(Special to The Star.)

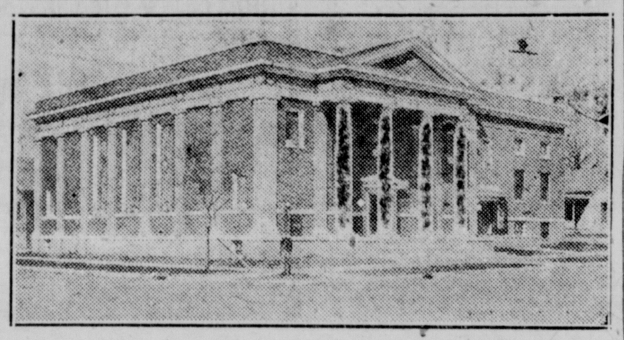

DESHLER, Neb., July 17.—The school system of Nebraska was discussed here Wednesday evening before a large audience by Superintendent C. L. Westcott, who is a candidate for state superintendent. Mr. Westcott emphasized his stand in favor of the schools remaining under the control of the local communities, the people of which support them by taxation and give them their patronage and moral support. The very principles of democracy upon which they are founded demand this, he asserted.

Superintendent Westcott stands opposed to placing the schools under national control, with a cabinet officer at the head, stating that such proposal is subversive of the principles upon which they are founded. The educational policies of the state, whereby the school trustees are being gradually taken farther from the people, who should control them, bear the earmarks of the educational ring of the state, it was declared, and it will soon be that the teacher of the rural school will have to be the daughter of the rich in order to qualify.

The county superintendent should be given more power, Mr. Westcott stated, for he stands closer to the educational system than any other person. He is in direct contact with the village and rural schools which are the majority of those over which the state superintendent has supervision. The county superintendent should work in direct harmony and in co-operation with the state superintendent in carrying out the educational policies of the state, instead of being submerged into a bookkeeper.

There should be no discrimination as to schools, but all should have equality before the law. The distribution of special cousres and training should take place without discrimination, for the child in the small village school has as much right to these privileges as the child in the larger school, while the smaller school has as much right to them as the school in the larger community.

Find Proof That Great Living River Under Surface Cheyenne County

(Special to The Star.)

SIDNEY, Neb., July 17.—That irrigation is to play an important part in agricultural development in the Lodge Pole valley and through Cheyenne county is seen from the interest shown in testing out pumping plants in various parts of the county with the idea of ascertaining practical with mechanical equipment. Irrigation will open up pursuits in agriculaural lines not now possible where natural moisture is depended upon for germination and maintenance of plant life.

Tests made by local people, organized for the purpose of capitalizing a large irrigation propect in this county to take water from an underground living stream for general distribution, show that water in unlimited quantities can be had from shallow wells and that the natural contour of the country would permit a system of ditches capable of irrigating several thousand acres at a minimum of cost.

Individual pumping plants are also being tried out with the object in view of determining the cost of irrigation by pumping on small acreage, and while no authentic figures are available, it seems to be the opinion that with reasonable power cost many farmers will be able to diversify their crops to an extent that will employ more labor and increase activity in farming. Tractors for driving pumping units work successfully and with distiate, or other cheap fuel, the cost per acre of practical irrigation can be held to a satisfactory minimum.

In this valley water in abundance is found at depths of from 40 to 60 feet and the cost of drilling and casing is not unreasonable. Where tests have been made the underground vein of water seems to be approximately 30 feet thick and in wells where pumping has been tried, the water level cannot be lowered by successive pumping, so it would seem that the supply is inexhaustible.

Find Great Vein.

A recent test for irrigation water was completed at the farm of McIntosh and Martin, three miles west of the city. In this test the vein of water was struck at about 60 feet and the drill went through 30 feet of water to hard substance. A pump was set up on the casing with a 6-inch discharge flow-line and a tractor was used for power.

A 12-hour run on this test is said to have cost no more than $2 for fuel and the output of the pump is estimated at 1200 gallons a minute. In the estimation of irrigation experts with proper ditching, a single pump proposition of this type would successfully irrigate 25 to 40 acres of land without natural moisture, and for occasional irrigation a greater area could naturally be covered, depending upon the nature of the ground and the action of water upon it.

It is the opinion of farmers and others interested in more intensive farming on smaller acreage, that with a water supply such as is available in this territory and it's nearness to the surface, it will only be a question of a short time until every well regulated farm will either have a private irrigation pumping plant run by electric current or combustion engine power for use as the occasion demands for truck farming, or other crops that require great quantities of water to develop heavy production.

Such a situation will lead, naturally, to the demand for large unit pumping plants to feed extensive irrigation canals. Propects sufficiently large to make irrigation general in this part of western Nebrakka would ,necessarily require tremendous capital, but with the possibilities for large return from such investment for everyone concerned, the matter of capital will follow when it has been fully determined that irrigation by pumping is entirely practical.

These 100,000-Mile Studebakers are proof of One-Profit Value

In March we published a roster of 274 Studebaker owners who had driven their cars from 100,000 to more than 300,000 miles—a few of the veteran Studebakers throughout the world. Since then, hundreds of new names, voluntarily submitted, have been added to this record of Studebaker dependability and stamina. The list below contains 817 hundred-thousand-mile Studebakers. And almost every day new names are added to this honor roll of service. Here is conclusive proof of the thousands of miles of excess transportation built into every Studebaker.

Studebaker proves stamina by smashing transcontinental record

On June 17th, a stock model Studebaker Big Six driven by Ab Jenkins and Ray Peck of Salt Lake City, established a new transcontinental record, bridging the 3471-mile gap between New York and San Francisco in 86 hours, 20 minutes. It lowered the previous automobile record by 16 hours and 25 minutes—beat the fastest time by train, 6 hours and 25 minutes. An average speed of 40.2 miles per hour was maintained in spite of terrific rainstorms, fog and deep mud.

Even under the extremely unfavorable conditions encountered throughout the gruelling trip, gasoline consumption averaged 13.4 miles per gallon and oil, 315.5 miles per quart.

It is doubtful if you will ever demand such severe service from your car as this transcontinental run required. Yet it proves why Studebaker performs so unfailingly in every-day use—why hundreds of owners have testified mileage records ranging from 100,000 to 300,000 miles.

Tex Considers Chicago as Title Battle Scene

WINDY CITY IN LINE FOR FIGHT

Tex Rickard Flirts With Chicagoans On Topic of Staging Dempsey-Tunney Bout In Lake City Stadium.

NEW YORK, July 17.—(I. N. S.)—Jack Dempsey versus Gene Tunney. That's the bill for Chicago September 16.

While Tex Rickard, promoter de luxe and proprietor of the new Madison Square Garden, refused tonight to deny or confirm this program, its authenticity was established on very good authority.

This authority is so close to Tex that it was said the bout would be held at the new municipal stadium in Chicago, which seats 100,000, with a gate that is expected to set a brand new mark for receipts.

Rickard In Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 17. — (INS)— Denying reports that the proposed Dempsey-Tunney world's heavyweight championship bout had been definitely assigned to Chicago, Tex Rickard, New York promoter, tonight officially and personally made known his presence in Chicago in behalf of the much-discussed title attraction.

Rickard early in the evening was reported to have made attempts to reach certain men close to the fight game here by long distance telephone from New York. The calls, it later developed, were from a conference between Rickard and five influential Chicagoans who weighed the advisability of staging a Dempsey-Tunney bout as a benefit affair in the Grant Park stadium early in September.

Confers With Chicagoans.

Rickard refused to disclose the identity of the local men, but promised an official announcement Monday. His visit here, he said, was to feel out the enthusiasm of the Chicago fans in an effort to arrive at a final decision regarding the site for the fight. Jersey City and New York still are possibilities, he asserted, adding that at present considerable pressure was being exerted to keep the bout in New York.

"I don't know what the latest movement is in Gotham," he said, "but I do know an effort was made to reach me from there today. The thing still is up in the air."

Giants Let Loose Vicious Attack In Eighth; Beat Cubs

CHICAGO, July 17.—Unleashing a vicious attack in the ninth which drove Blake from the mound, the New York Giants scored five runs to win the first game of their series from the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 3, this afternoon. In the eighth inning Charley Grimm had tied the score with a home run into the right field bleachers. The score:

ROSCOE HALL.

Clyde Hudkins, brother-manager of Ace, the Nebraska Wildcat, has more than one string to his fighting bow. In addition to managing Brother Ace, who ranks now as a live contender for the world's lightweight title, Brother Clyde is directing the fighting affairs of Roscoe Hall, champion lightweight of Iowa. Hall clashed in a 10-round main event at Los Angeles Friday night, losing a decision to Fields after a mitten combat that was a genuine scrap in every round.

Art Hudkins, brother of Clyde and Ace, was due to pull away from Los Angeles yesterday, making the drive to Lincoln with the Hudkins family car, and Hall also was ticketed to make the trip. The three Hudkins brothers and Hall will drive from Lincoln to New York, departing late this week, and Ace immediately will go into training for his main event rookus with Stanley Loayza, Chilean lightweight, dated for August 6 at the Coney Island stadium. Hall will be one of the Wildcat's training partners.

Ace will be wooling baseball logs today at Nebraska City where the Hudkins Wildcats will stack up against a team representing the Otoe county capital. Ace is carded to perform in the outfield.

Tight Pitching and Absence Of Errors Factors In Twin Triumph.

BOSTON, July 17.—Fine pitching by Harriss and Wingfield enabled the Boston Red Sox to upset the Chicago White Sox in both games of a double-header here this afternoon. The scores were 3 to 2 and 4 to 3. The White Sox threatened in the ninth inning of each game, but their rally was nipped in the first game when Kamm bunted into a double play. In the second game, Wingfield weakened, but Ruffling, who was rushed in to the rescue, pulled the Red Sox out of the hole. The scores:

FUNK'S TRIPLE SEWS UP GAME

Three-Base Blow, With Bases Jammed, Deciding Factor In 7-3 Defeat of Links By Indian Tribe.

BY CHARLES J. BRILL.

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 17.—One pitched ball often decides a baseball game. One such was a fast one over the heart of the plate which Joe Marty delivered to Eliza Funk in the second inning of today's game.

The bases were filled as the big Lincoln pitcher cut loose the final heave, but by the time Purdy had chased down Funk's long drive to the centerfield fence and had relayed it to the infield, they were clear, with the exception of the batter, who was perched on third.

This blow decided the rubber game of the series between Lincoln and Oklahoma City, the final score being 7 to 3.

Got After Buckshot.

Lincoln started as if it would give Buckshot May a beating similar to that administered to Roberts the previous day, for Veltman, first up, crashed a double to right and Zwilling followed with another two-baser to left. Buckshot then tightened, Zwilling was caught attempting to steal third, Purdy fanned and Moore cut down Gunther.

Lincoln's other two tallies came in the fourth with Zwilling's second double, Purdy's triple and Gunther's sacrifice fly. After that May was master of the situation.

Indians One Big Inning.

Oklahoma City's big second inning was enough to win the ball game. McDaniel had grounded out when Felber singled to center for Oklahoma City's first hit. Moore filed to Veltman, making it two down, but Groft was passed intentionally, after Felber had stolen second bringing up May. Buckshot crossed up Marty by picking on the first ball over the plate after taking two wide ones. May's effort was a single to left field which filed the score by putting Felber across the rubber. Armstrong shot a hot one through Gottleber for a single and Hock bounced one off the same chap's shin to fill the bases. Then it was that Funk cracked out his game-winning triple, Johnson relieved Marty and tossed out Conway to close the inning.

Funke Busy Athlete.

Funk beat out a slugged bunt in the fifth, advanced a base each time on two sacrifices and scored on Felber's single to left.

Funk again beat out a bunt in the single, took third while McDaniel was forcing Conway and then scored on a double steal, beating Haley's return to the plate. The score:

Wymore Team Uncorks Winning Streak.

WYMORE Neb., July 17.—The Wymore American Legion base ball team is on a winning streak this season that is unusual and is deserving of more than passing notice. They have only been defeated twice this season, by Shubert three weeks ago, and later played that team winning from them, and one game, four weeks ago, with Fairbury at that city, was a 2 to 2 tie at the end of the fifth inning, called on account of rain, and the Wymoreans have since administered a defeat to that team. The Kansas City Monarchs won here this week. In other words, out of the last thirty-two games played by Wymore, they have lost two and played one tie, winning all the others. This season the team has played Pawnee, Fairbury, Plymouth, Blue Rapids, Sterling, Shubert and Humboldt. Last season in addition to Pawnee, Fairbury, Plymouth, and Blue Rapids, they played Falls City, Diller, Lincoln, Varsity Cleaners, Beatrice, Burchard, Lincoln Ramblers, Lee Brothers Circus and Tecumseh. Their pitcher of last season, George Malicky, young six-foot farmer lad of this vicinity, is gone, signed by the Omaha Western league and farmed out to a Texas league. Wymore has replaced him in Art Liska.

The personnel of the team, as shown in the picture is: Standing—A. Orth, rf; Ralph "Toots" Kirschner, 1b; Art Liska, p; J. "Jiggs" Parker, 3b; D. Dillon, 2b; John Giles, utility; Albert Hogue, manager; C. B. Ellis, scorer. Sitting—R. Bell, utility; Howard Campbell, cf; Harry Pisar, mascot; B. Patton, lf; L. LeBarge, ss; R. Wiar, c; J. Dalton, c.

This is an American Legion team. Every man in it saw service in France, except Orth, Kirschner, Liska, Giles and the mascot. These were either too old or too young or had families. Kirschner was former manager of the Beatrice Blue in the Nebraska State league. LeBarge is a former member of the Beartice and Norfolk State league teams, and in 1922 played with the St. Louis Cardinals. Patton and Bell at one time played on the University of Nebraska bal lteam. All work in the railway shops and at various trades at Wymore. All played on the team at Wymore last season except Orth, Liska, Parker, Giles and LeBarge. Last season Kirschner batted. 434, and Dalton, Dillon, Malicky and Campbell batted over .300. They are all batting good this year. Orth has poled three home runs this season.

MAHOOD WINNER CITY NET TITLE

ing sun and the excessive heat, together with the strenuous program of tournament play the past week, seemed to slow down the play, neither contender presenting the caliber of game exhibited in the semi-finals.

Mahood had weathered a busy five-set doubles match during the morning, while Stanton ground out four sets of singles and five sets of doubles late Friday afternoon.

Both Play Carefully.

Joe Stanton, 53-year-old veteran of the clay courts, elected to play his usual careful game and, aside from a brief interval toward the close of the match, was successful in forcing Mahood to meet his style of game. The two players took their stands near the base line and continually drove back deep returns, sallying to the net for an occasional point or chopping to the side for a placement.

In the lobbing branch of the contest, Stanton had a slight advantage, the veteran player bombarding the backline. Mahood, however, had the larger variety of strokes and, mixing in a scoring cross-court drive, worked out the victory in straight sets.

Stanton Hard Fighter.

Battling against an apparently hopeless task, Stanton never quit fighting and was in the thick of the fray, scrapping as hard for the last point as he was at the start of the contest. In fact, the surprising success of the 53-year-old player in the past city tournament may be largely attributed to his "never-say-die" spirit. In the quarter-finals he pulled victory out of the fire after losing the first set, while in the semi-finals his ability to deliver under fire finally won him a victory.

The game-score of the three sets does not show the bitterness with which the match was contested all the way. The second game of the match went 24 points before Mahood finally forced Stanton into two errors to win. (The average game goes six points.) The time required to complete this game is shown by the fact that of the 24 points, only five were won by placements, the players exchanging shots on the other 19 points until the sphere sailed out or was netted.

Mahood Finishes Srong.

Stanton started the match by taking the first game with the loss of but two points. Mahood then took the 13-11 marathon and brought the score to 4-1 before Joe rallied to grab two consecutive games. Mahood then ran out with the loss of but two points.

After losing his service, Stanton captured three games for a 3-1 lead on the second set. Mahood then began driving to the corners with telling effect and took a 4-3 lead. Stanton making it 4-all an d5-all before he finally lost out, 7-5.

Stanton started the third set in strong fashion, capturing the first two games, serving an ace to win the second. The rally was only a flash, for Mahood suddenly forsook the back court game and took his stand at the net, hammering Stanton's lobb's for siv straight games and the final set.

ACROSS THE NET

Harold Snyder, Hastings city tennis champion and secretary of the Nebraska Tennis association, and Dwight Thomas, Hastings high coach and a leading Hastings tennis player, were in Lincoln Saturday in the interest of the Nebraska tennis tournament which will be held at Hastings, August 3-7.

Snyder reports that the Hastings tennis fans are planning a big tourney next month and that everything points to one of the best tournaments in the history of the racquet sport in this state. The tennis sport is going over big in the southwest section of the state this year and racqueteers from this section will warm up the last week of July at Arapahoe, the Southwest Association tourney being the cause for excitement.

Lincoln will send a good-sized delegation to Hastings for the state compet. Paul Mahood, city champion and present state champion, will head the group. Don Elliott, former state champion, and member of three state title doubles teams will be a member of the party. Gregg McBride, who paired with Elliott in winning the 1925 doubles title, will not be in the race this year as he is leaving this week on a European trip.

Hastings is well equipped to handle the tournament and players, who journey to the Adams county metropolis can be assured they will be royally entertained. Secretary Snyder reported Saturday that quarters will be provided all visiting players, that some special entertainment is being provided — in fact he assured Lincoln players that a good time awaited them at Hastings the first of next month.

One of outstanding features of the city tournament just closed was the playing of the Abels brothers of Malcolm. Lucas Abels, 15 years and Byron Abels, 11, kept their opponents always on their toes and they looked like the "real goods" as comers in the racquet sport. Their father B. B. Abels, also participated in the tournament, in fact Malcolm has a good-sized group of tennis fans making daily use of the court. The Abels youngsters plan to compete in the junior tourney at Hastings next month.

Invader First To Reach Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., July.—(I. N. S.)—The white-winged sails of the yacht Invader carried her to victory tonight in the race across the Pacific from Honolulu to San Francisco when she passed through the Golden Gate and arrived in this port at 6:40 p. m.

The Invader was the only one to cross the barrier so far.

The yachts Poinsetta and Mariner as yet had not arrived.

Coast Girl Plans Return To Courts In Defense of Title

BERKELEY, Calif., July 17.—(I. N. S.)—Helen Wills will defend her national women's singles tennis championship in 1926.

This definite statement was today issued by Dr. C. A. Wills, father of the champion, in Berkeley.

Championship play starts at Forest Hills, New York, August 16.

Dr. Wills wired his daughter to start slowly and work up to hard play.

"She has three weeks of practice tennis before the hard work the fourth week before the event," he said.

Predicts No Ill Effects.

"I am sure that there will be no ill effects. Helen has been taking a great deal of exercise and she is in good physical condition. You know it will be two and a half months after the operation when the tournament is played."

Julian Myrick, former president of the United States Lawn Tennis association, wired Dr. Wills from New York, as follows:

In Splendid Health.

"Mrs. Wills and Helen in splendid health. Send love. Will arrange to have Helen examined by specialists before tournament play. Looks well enough to play now."

"I see no reason why the operation should hamper Helen's game, either," Dr. Wills said today.

TEXAS LEAGUER GOT ITS LABEL

Ollie Pickering the Player Who Gave Name To Pop Hits Over Infield.

w In the summer of 1890, there dropped from a freight train when it landed in Houston, Texas, a young man who looked worse than an umbrella mender. He had a mission, so he went directly to the ball park and presented himself before the manager.

The "mgr" looked him over. He saw the lad had confidence. He also was keen enough to see through the dirt and general unkemptness of the lad that he possessed proportions and movements like an athlete. He bought him a hair-cut and a shave and told him to report at the park for the afternoon game.

Seven Hits In Seven Tries.

Trimmed up by the barber and in a clean uniform, the lad looked almost like a ball player. He made seven hits in the seven times he stepped up to the plate. All were of the short, looping kind which fall out of reach of the infielders and not far enough out for the outfielders. They were of the tantalizing kind—a style of hit that had never ben labeled. After that exhibition the manager named them Texas leaguers and to this da ythey are known by that name.

John J. McCloskey was the manager and Ollie Pickering was the player.

BAMBINO TAKES TOBOGGAN RIDE

Babe Ruth Loses Laurels As Leading Swatsman; Falk In First Place.

Babe Ruth of the Yankees was dethroned as the leading hitter in the American league last week, Bambino suffering a setback of 15 points. Dropping from first to third place among the regular performers brought him below Heilman of Detroit, who is second to Falk of Chicago, who kept the even tenor on his way to the top.

Fothergill of Detroit looked down upon all the others, but as he has faced the pitchers less than half as many times as Falk and 100 less than has Heilmann and Ruth he can hardly be counted as the bellwether of the flock.

Ruth had a tough week. He fell back in runs and his teammate, Gehrig, has a lead of three tallies. He is barely inside the line where each hit still counts for two bases. His only noteworthy feat was his twenty-seventh home run, which added just one to his total of the previous week.

Falk the Big Noise.

Falk, the real leader, was very much inevidence. He pounded out two homers in his march to the top and became a dangerous rival of Burns of Cleveland in the two-bagger division, the Indian first-sacker having a lead of only two. Jacobson of Boston also did great execution in intermediate hits with four two-baggers.

Simmons of the Athletics and Lazzeri of the Yankees went into a tie in homers for second honors with twelve each.

The hitting in general was robust all along the line with five teams gaining. Among the individual gainers were Burns, Mostil of Chicago, and Golsin and McNeeley of Washington. The latter added 22 points and became one of the leaders. Rice of Washington and Collins of Chicago were losers, while Dugan of the Yankees hit the toboggan for a greasy slide.

Yanks Tumble In Hitting.

The stolen base mark of the crippled Meusel was tied by Rice with Hunnefield and Mostil of Chicago close up.

The Yankees dropped back to the even .300 mark in team hitting. This represented a loss of five points, some evidence of their losing tilts with the pitchers. Washington had a few fruitful games and advanced seven points for the largest gain of the week.

Pate of the Athletics, who has only figured in 6 landings, has run his winning record up to eight and leads the pitchers. Lyons of Chicago, after many attempts, finally chalked up his thirteenth win.

WATSON HOLDS TARIFF WILL BE WELCOME ISSUE

Leader of Conservatives Is Confident Of Republican Victory.

Declares Administration Has Been Economical and Efficient.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The American people will choose a new congress at the polls in November while primary elections will be held all over the country during the summer. In this article a spokesman for the conservative element in the republican party describes what he sees as the issue in the coming campaign.

BY SENATOR JAMES E. WATSON
REPUBLICAN OF INDIANA.
(Leader of the conservative republicans in the senate.)
(Written expressly for International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The republican party is entirely willing to accept the challenge of the minority in congress to make the tariff the dominating issue of the congressional elections in November.

The tariff will be the high note of this campaign, chiefly because of its relation to the farm problem and agriculture legislation. The American people will reject any plan to endanger our prosperity and disrupt industry generally by tearing down the tariff and, in my opinion, will support the republican proposal for sane legislation which will permit the farmer to obtain full benefit of the tariff protection placed on agriculture products.

There will be a diversity of issues in this campaign, some local and others national in character. The enviable legislative record of the republican congress cannot be gainsaid and it will play an important part in campaign. Under republican administration and a republican congress, the country has enjoyed unprecedented prosperity. The people have been given an economic administration of their government and a commensurate reduction in the burdens of war time taxation. These are real achievements which will be remembered by the American people when they go to the polls in November.

Points To Accomplishments.

The republican party too has shown a sympathetic attitude toward labor and the problems of the working man. The present congress enacted the railroad mediation bill, initiating at the request of labor and railroads a series of mediation boards for the settlement of all disputes by arbitration.

Law enforcement will be another issue. Regardless of the attitude of individuals toward prohibition, there is a general demand from the people for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment so long as it remains in the Constitution. The republican party is actively meeting that demand.

The tariff, in my opinion, however, will overshadow these as the dominant issue. If we take the democratic proposal for free trade, we destroy the ability of the American laborer to earn the American wage scale and that in turn will destroy his ability to buy and the American market for home made goods.

The American farmer sells 90 per cent of all he produces in this home market. If the market is destroyed or even curtailed, it will throw that much greater burden on the farmer. Prosperity for the farmer can only be brought about by maintaining a strong and prosperous home market while lifting agriculture to the economic level achieved by industry under the republican tariff. The sole question is to export surplus crops so that the farmer will not sell his whole crop at world prices, but will be able to obtain the advantages of the tariff.

This was the object of the legislation I fostered in the last session. The fight for its enactment will not be dropped, and it is my belief we will get the sympathetic support of industry and agriculture generally in this campaign.

I believe the American people will continue the republican party in power because of its record of achievements. I expect the republican party will retain control of both house and senate, although our senate majority may be reduced.

WOODRUFF TO ACT

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 17.—(I. N.S.)—Attorney General George Woodruff will proceed at once with legal steps against the Sesqui-centennial exhibition association in Philadelphia to compel it to show cause why it may break the state criminal laws by keeping open commercial features on Sunday.

The attorney general signalized his intention today in issuing a formal statement covering his proposed course.

ASKS $100,000 HEART BALM.

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—(I.N.S)—Charging another woman with stealing the love of her husband, Mrs. Claire Anderson filed two suits in Superior court today. In one she demanded $100,000 heart balm from Mrs. Florence Omley, and in the other she asked a divorce from Harry M. Anderson. Both Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Olney were said to have appeared in motion pictures.

Student "Band of Six" Half Century Ago Meet Again Here

The delayed keeping of a compact between six young students, made fifty-one years ago, is being realized this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Dale, in University Place.

The six former students of Rochester, Wisconsin, Seminary in 1875, are meeting at the home for a reunion, the first since they left school. Mr. and Mrs. Royal Jackson of South Dakota and Dr. and Mrs John Thomas of Phoenix, Arizona are the visitors.

When the "band of six," as they called themselves, separated in 1875, they were Walter Dale, Ella Hale, Royal Jackson, Anna Moulton, John Thomas, and Luella Eccles. Later Mr. Dale and Miss Hale, Miss Moulton and Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Thomas and Miss Eccles were married.

One couple comes 500 miles and the other 1,700 miles to attend the reunion.

When the six parted at the close of their school they planned to meet in 1995, but adverse circumstances prevented the meeting, and until now the plans were never carried out.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson went into South Dakota as pioneers, and were leaders in their community. One of their two sons is now with Mr. Jackson in a bank there, and the other has become a farmer.

Mr. Dale became a minister, but his health later forced him to give up that calling and he became a farmer in Nebraska. The couple raised six children. Raymond, the eldest, has been engaged in educational work throughout the state for 20 years. Three daughters live in or near Lincoln, now married after careers as teachers. Clinton was a farmer in Lancaster county and now lives in Washington. Allen died at the age of 19. Mr. Dale served as a member of the state senate from 1893 to 1895.

The third couple, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas lived in Waterford, Wisconsin, for a time and later moved to Arizona because of Mrs. Thomas' health, and Dr. Thomas took up medical practice there. They have four children, one a physician in Los Angeles, another a lawyer in the same city, and two married daughters.

DANUBE BREAKS THROUGH DIKES

Troops Sent to Batchka Province Following Cloudbursts and Floods.

BELGRADE, July 17.—(U.P.)—Troops were dispatched to Somber in the province of Batchka today to construct dikes for the protection of cities and villages threatened by floods which have caused thousands of dollars damage to crops and other property in Jugo-Slavia within the past twenty-four hours. The Danube river has inundated large areas in which the fields were ready for the harvest.

Railway, telegraph and telephone communication between Oujintze and Srajevo has been interrupted for several days by cloudbursts. Huge boulders crashed onto the tracks and they had been so weakened by the rainfall that a considerable section was broken.

No confirmation has been obtained of reports that fifty-four persons had been drowned when the dykes between Apatin and Neusatz broke. The reports said that the population for weeks had been living in the upper parts of their houses because the lower rooms had been ruined by flood waters which continued to menace them with a second inundation.

Terrific cloudbursts in southern Serbia finally raised the Danube to the point where the dikes no longer could stand the strain. It was estimated that forty-thousand acres have been inundated by this new cloudburst, in addition to those areas which were flooded during the past month.

BUCHAREST, July 17.—(U. P.)—The Danube was rising steadily tonight, threatening the city with unparalleled damage as the water came nearer the stage at which it would inundate the low-lying areas on each side. Warehouses were hurriedly evacuated this morning.

Terrific heat was reported throughout Rumania. At Bucharest the temperature was 100 in the shade. Thunder storms fianlly dispersed the heat.

Many Lives Claimed.

VIENNA, July 17.—(UP)—Storms and floods which swept Jugo-Slavia Thursday cost forty-nine lives, according to dispatches received here. Hail stones weighing two pounds were reported near Ipek, in southern Jugo-Slavia, and it was reported that the bodies of drowned persons were found ten miles from the regular river channel.

Hail and lightning was reported to have killed two children and 2,000 sheep.

Music Teacher Admits Slaying Of His Mate

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 17.—(I.N.S.)—Agostino Izzo, middle-aged music teacher, who murdered his wife with a hammer and then put the body in a box and buried it in a lonely spot on the shores of Onondaga lake, will plead self defense, it was indicated today.

Izzo's conscience plagued him for two days before he summoned courage to inform the police. He said his wife, the mother of seven children, several of them grown, attempted to stab him with a dagger while he was working in the cellar last Tuesday. In self defense, Izzo says, he wheeled around with a hammer in his hand, struck her on the head, killing her with the first blow.

Izzo said he blessed the body with holy water before he put it in the box and surrounded the makeshift coffin with blessed candles before he hired a truckman to cart it away.

DEMANDS RECOUNT.

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I. N. S.)—The Chicago Bar association today demanded a recount of the votes in the April Cook county primary by which Assistant State's Attorney Joseph P. Savage was nominated for county judge.

Andrews Finds Rum Running Is Hard to Check

LONDON, July 17.—(INS)—The rum running epidemic is going to be difficult to check.

Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, American prohibition director, admitted as much tonight when he declared that after three days of "diagnosis," the cure is not yet ready to be applied.

General Andrews, who came here to work out with the British authorities co-operative measures whereby rum running from British territory into the United States might be stopped, is not discouraged but he finds his task no easy one.

"We are making satisfactory progress, said General Andrews. "but we have not been able to completely diagnose this case yet. We are getting splendid co-operation from the British government."

The task is made more difficult, it is understood, by the reluctance of the British colonial governments.

FIGHT CONTINUED ON FOREST FIRES

Hundreds Battle Worst Blaze In Years In Colville National Forest.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—(INS)—Forestry officials on the Pacific coast tonight looked with apprehension upon the weekend influx of city bred visters to the national and state forests.

High temperatures and low humidity, the two worst natural foes of the forests, combined to create a situation which was aggravated by the possibility of man-started fires.

In Washington the worst situation existed. In the Colville national forest 800 men are desperatley battling the worst series of fires since 1910, according to reports to Olympia. The fires in this area, in Stevens and Pend Orielle counties, cover 11,300 acres, the reports said.

In California the worst situation was in the Klamath national forest in the northern part of the state, and in Trinity national forest, also in the northern end of the state.

In Klamath forest lightning-fired blazes, that had been under control, were fanned to new fury by high winds and three of these fires have assumed large proportions. Four hundred men are battling the blazes.

So serious is the situation in Trinity national forest that Redding has been appealed to send men, as the sparsely settled county has failed to produce enough able bodied men to combat the fires. Ten fires, all started by careless guests of the forest, were burning, late reports to forestry headquarters here said.

Several brush and forest fires in other parts of the state were under control tonight and officials hoped to cope with any new blazes promptly.

Prince Gustavus Goes To Colorado

GRAND CANYON, Ariz., July 17.—(INS.)—Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and Princess Louise of Sweden, and their entourage today were enroute by motor from Gallup, N. M., to Mesa Verde national park, Colo.

The royal party left the Phantom ranch in the canyon's bottom early yesterday and made the climb of some 6,000 feet up the hazardous trail to the Arizona side in less than four hours.

"Too magnificent for words,' was the comment of the royal visitors.

The prince and princess were welcomed at the head of the trail by Stephen T. Mather, director of national parks.

The party motored along the rim of the canyon, visited the Grandview ranch and were greatly interested in a rare collection of Indian antiques.

On Tuesday they will leave for Los Angeles, where they will be guests at the San Marino home of Henry E. Huntington.

Push Recruiting Of Prohib Army

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(INS)—The government is rapidly recruiting its big army of prohibition agents preparatory to a tremendous drive against the rum trust.

Dry forces in all large cities will be reinforced. The largest forces will be maintained in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, New Orleans and some other cities.

Already reinforcements have been authqrized for New York, San Francisco, Seattle, and other points.

Romance Seen In Approaching Visit Of Princess Ileana

SEATTLE, July 17.—(UP)—There was some speculation in society circles here today over the scheduled approaching visit of Queen Marie of Rumania, and the Princess Ileana, who it is understood, will be guests of Samuel Hill, wealthy Seattle resident and son-in-law of James J. Hill, "empire builder" of railroad history.

There was some belief that the queen might be seeking a desirable marriage for Ileana. It was pointed out that James Hill, son of Samuel Hill, a single man of about 28 years, was of marriage age and might be looked upon favorably by the Queen and princess.

Friends were not certain as to his whereabouts, but young Hill was believed to be somewhere in the east.

YOUNG MAN IS FOUND IN FAINT

Ernest Carter Picked Up Unconscious At Seventeenth and W.

Ernest Carter, 18, who was found unconscious near Seventeenth and W streets about midnight Saturday, was in a serious condition at 2:30 Sunday morning, it was said by Dr. W. F. Slattery who attended him after being taken to St. Elizabeth's hospital in Splain and Schnell's ambulance, from Seventeenth and R streets.

Carter was found in a faint by passersby who carried him to Seventeenth and R streets and then called the ambulance.

At the hospital it was said the young man had been kicked by a horse several years ago and that his fainting spell was probably due to this injury.

Little was known of Carters identity, but it was believed at the hospital that he worked on a farm and was on his way to Lincoln to spend the weekend when he fainted.

PASSENGER TRAIN WRECK AT HALLAM

Tender Rock Island Limited Leaves Rails and Blocks Traffic.

Four wheels of the engine tender on the Rock Island's Colorado Limited train which arrives here from the west at 1:40 a. m. were derailed two miles east of Hallam at 1:10 o'clock Sunday morning, causing several hours delay to traffic.

No information regarding the accident would be given out by the night operator here but it was learned from the division superintendent at Fairbury that the accident was not serious.

A wrecker was sent out from Fairbury for use in case it was necessary, the superintendent said. At 2:30 the superintendent said that the officials at Fairbury had received no information other than a brief report from he conductor saying that the tender had been derailed.

The night agent here said that the train does not stop at Hallam. This would indicate that the train was travelling at least a speed of 50 miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Scott Brothers See Each Other For Last Time

CHICAGO, July 17.—(I.N.S.)—Russell Scott and his brother, Robert, were back in their separate cells at the county jail today following a brief visit at the end of which they said "goodbye." They never expect to see each other again.

Both have been convicted of the murder of Joseph Maurer, a drug clerk killed during a holdup. In a few days Robert goes to the penitentiary for life; a few weeks later Russell goes to his death on the gallows.

It was the first meeting of the brothers since that fateful day two years ago when they held up the City Hall pharmacy and killed young Maurer. They had asked to be permitted to share the same cell until Robert leaves for the penitentiary, but Warden George Weideling refused, saying:

"I'm taking no chances with Russell Scott. When he was at Chester state hospital he tried every way possible to arrange an escape. That was brought out during his recent sanity hearing. I'll have no such plotting here."

Colorado Company Wins Twenty-Year Battle In Courts

PUEBLO, Colo., July 17.—(I. N. S.)—After twenty years the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company Saturday won an injunction suit brought against it in 1906 by the Carnegie Steel Company of Pittsbuhgh, for an alleged infringement of patent rights on steel processes.

The United States Circuit court of Appeals at St. Louis upheld United States District Judge J. Foster Symes in dismissing the suit.

When the action was originally filed in the Federal court here it was in the form of an injunction restraining the local steel firm from mixing molten pig metal in a patented process.

Counsel for the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company filed a demurrer to the action on the ground that no cause for the complaint existed. The demurrer was sustained by the then Federal Judge Robert E. Lewis. This decision was appealed and reversed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. It was returned here for retrial and Judge Symes dismissed the case a year ago. It was again appealed and this time upheld.

ANSON LEADS ALL FOR DURABILITY

Old "Pop" of Chicago Club Played 26 Seasons In Major Leagues.

There were 12 players in major league baseball who served 20 or more years in big time. Anson leads all with 26 seasons in major league baseball. "Cy" Young and Jim McGuire each had 22 years of big league service. Bill Dahlen, Lave Cross, Fred Clarke, Honus Wagner and Larry Lajoie put in 21 seasons. Jack Beckley, Roger Connor and James O'Rourke each had 20 years of big league baseball. Walter Johnson has entered his twentieth year and Ty Cobb is in his twenty-first year.

Counting years served in major and minor leagues, many players have touched the 25 to 30-year mark. For instance, Joe McGinnity began the game in 1893. Then there was Billy Hart with 26 seasons at the pitching game. Jesse Burkett, Billy Hamilton, Tony Mullane, Jack Beckley and Theo. Breitenstein all put in 25 or more seasons in organized baseball as players.

SILVER FLINT'S RECORD UNIQUE

Caught Largest Percent Of Games In History Of Diamond Sport.

Here is the record of a catcher—one of the old sort who caught without gloves or mask, to say nothing of the breast-pad. "Silver" Flint, in 1877, caught 120 of the 121 games played by the Indianapolis club. "The Only" Nolan was the hurler or regular pitcher. That bird had some speed, even if he threw the ball with a side motion swing. Here is the record made by Flint during the seven seasons he was with the Indianapolis and Chicago clubs. Beginning with 1884, this old war-horse was relieved by having two more catchers on the team:

1877, Indianapolis, 120 out of the 121 games played.
1878, Indianapolis, 56 out of the 60 games played.
1879, Chicago, 74 out of the 79 games played.
1880, Chicago, 82 out of the 84 games played.
1881, Chicago, 77 out of the 84 games played.
1882, Chicago, 79 out of the 84 games played.
1883, Chicago, 85 out of the 98 games played.

A total of 573 out of the 610 games played in seven consecutive year, or only 37 games missed in that length of time. Flint was catching the greatest hurlers of that period, also considered the speediest—Goldsmith, Larry Corcoran, "Big Jim" McCormack an dNolan.

Diamond Briefs.

Pitcher Blaeholder of the Tulsa team in the Western, who has won 17 games so far this season, lost two in successive days as relief hurler.

"Roxy" Snipes, Jacksonville outfielder in the Southeastern league, made successive home runs on two pitches off Wolfe and Newton of Albany.

Pitcher Moll of Eureka in the Southwestern, who has been filling in in the outfield and infield, had to go to the hill the other day. Since then he has won three successive games, the last one a two-hit affair.

The St. Louis Cardinals had beaten the Boston Braves ten straight so far this season when the redskins turned and won, 19 to 5.

The majors have nothing on the minors. Washington hardly had time to digest its twelve runs against the Browns before Decatur, in the Three-I league went out and made thirteen against Quincy in one frame.

Dazzy Vance of the Robins is six feet one and "Sparky" Adams of the Cubs is 5:4 1-2, which probably accounted for the fact that the midget second sacker got four out of the seven hits his team made in the final game against the Dodgers. However, Spary's hits weren't all made off Vance. Walter Ehrhardt, 6:2, contributed his mite.

Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast league went through a double-header with only ten assists.

Expect Boom For Frank Lowden at Iowa Convention

DES MOINES, Ia., July 17.—(I. N. S.)—Political observers were predicting here today that an effort would be made by anti-administration forces to inject a "Lowden-for-president" plank into the Iowa republican platform when the state convention meets here next Wednesday.

The convention comes fast on the heels of two important farm group meetings here. The corn belt committee, recruited from the membership of the twenty-four farm organizations of the country, meets Monday, and the corn area committee of twenty-two, appointed at the mid-winter American relief conference of bankers and business men of eleven western states on Tuesday. Both groups are committed to practically the same program for federal farmaid.

THREATENS TO RESIGN.

WARSAW, July 17.—(INS)—Charging that he had been insulted by Marshal Pilsudski, foreign Minister Zalewski today threatened to resign his portfolio. Zalewski, it is understood, feels that he was insulted when Pilsudski requested him to leave his study upon the arrival of the British Minister to Poland Wille.

AUTHORIZE NEW AGENTS.

WASHINGTON, July 17—(INS.)—The treasury today authorized appointment of seventy-five new prohibition agents in the Philadelphia district. The Philadelphia prohibition office also was authorized to replace fifty discharged sometime ago with new material.

"PAR SAM" EASY WINNER OF TITLE

Reynolds Gives Golf Lesson To Pollard In State Tourney Finals.

OMAHA, Neb., July 17.—(UP)—"Flaming youth" had its fling and was set back in its proper sphere in the Nebraska golf tournament here this week.

Sam Reynold, who has been playing in golf tournaments since 1912, was for the seventh time crowned "king of them all in the Cornhusker state," when he crushed Jack Pollard, 17-year-old caddie, in the final round here today. The score was 8 up and 7 to go."

Made the "Kids" Like It.

It is doubtful if Reynolds ever enjoyed winning a tournament as he did this one. He had been "egged" into the tournament by his friends, who figured that he would get the trouncing of his career at the hands of one of the three "kid" caddies—Johnny Goodman, Frank Sidlicek and Jack Pollard. These boys, all 17 years old, have been sensations this season. They established themselves in the trans-Mississippi tournament at St. Louis when two of them worked into the semi-finals and the other, Sidlicek, won the consolation prize.

Right Down the Line.

But Reynolds took them one after another and trounced them. His first match was with Sidlicek and it was the toughest one of the tournament. Frankie carried the veteran to the thirty-ninth green before he capitulated, Pollard and Goodman were easy prey.

To make Reynolds' showing all the more important, he beat Dr. Gene Slattery, last year's champion in the second round, Slattery was at the peak of his form two weeks ago, having won the junior chamber of commerce national tournament in Florida.

Defied Lack of Practice.

The difference in age of the players wasn't as remarkable as the fact that Reynolds of late years has been busy at his business to seriously take care of his golf practice. He is only 36 years old. The youngsters, on the other hand, play golf every day and always are in shape to put forth their best.

Not undaunted by their defeats, Goodman, Sidlicek and Pollard boarded a cattle train tonight for Minneapolis, where they will take part in the western amateur tournament starting Monday.

Cattle Train Chambermaids.

None of them has an excessive amount of funds, so their transportation was arranged by friendly stockmen and Johnny, Frankie and Jackie will work their way to the twin cities as chambermaids on the cattle train.

Reynolds simply was unbeatable in his match with Pollard today. He lived up to his nackname "Par Sam" by shooting the Field club course under par this morning. He duplicated the achievement on the elever holes played this afternoon and from the form he displayed could have shot under par several time more had Pollard forced him into extra holes.

Pacific Golfers Win Team Match

WHITE BEAR YACHT CLUB, Minn., July 17.—(U. P.)—The Pacific northwest golf team today defected the western team in a match offficially starting the western golf association's 1926 amateur tournament.

After taking eight singles matches played in the morning, the northwest team slumped badly in the afternoon and lost three of the doubles matches, trying the fourth. The doubles matches were for best ball. The score was 9 to 7.

In these stenuous days of pitching it isn't often that a hurler wins two games in one series. Harry Collins of the Tigers and George Uhle of the Indians turned the trick, the former downing the Red Sox twice and Uhle trimmed the Yankee two times.

Delaney Willing To Renew Rumpus

NEW YORK, July 17.—(I. N. S.)—Jack Delaney, light-heavyweight world's champion, said today that he would fight the former champion, Paul Berlenbach, again "if the public demands it."

Delaney paid a visit to his old friend, Police Inspector John J. Sullivan before leaving for Bridgeport, Conn. The champion was accompanied by his wife, Peter Reilly, his manager and Benny Stern, one of Delaney's seconds.

The newly-crowned king of the light-heavyweights said that his thumb, injured in last night's bout, was painful, but not fractured.

PIRATE SWATTER BOOSTS AVERAGE

Grantham Gains 41 Points To Take Second Place In National Loop.

George Grantham of the Pirates was the sensation among the batters in the National league during the past week. The Pirate first sacker came from nowhere to assume a commanding position among the top notchers.

Only Bressler of Cincinnati stands between the Pirate slugger and the top. Bressler was in only one game during the week in which he lost five points. Grantham, meantime, added 41 points to his rather mediocre percentage now being only seven points back of the Reds' cripple and in second place.

Herman of Brooklyn, after lording it over the others at the top for a short spell, went into reverse and dropped back 21 points for one of the biggest losses of the week. Grantham's terrific hitting helped to elevate Pittsburgh to second place in team hitting, even though the champions failed to do better than break even in games played. Traynor was one of the Buccos to advance, but Cuyler took another header.

Hornsby Goes on Spree.

Hornsby celebrated his return to the game by fattening his average, although his team fell in the ruck as a whole. Including his batting feats were two home runs, which puts him withing striking distance of Wilson of Chicago and Bottomley of the Cardinals. Wilson became the leader of the long distance hitters by putting the ball out of reach of the fly-chasers twice. Bottomley also added two to his total.

For all-around hitting, Grantham earned the medals. He smashed out four two-baggers, three triples and one home run.

Blades retained his lead in runs, with Cyler nearest. Frish and Youngs of the Giants went into a tie for most stolen bases.

Reds on Top in Hitting.

Chicago, although winning more games than it lost, dropped from second place in team hitting to fifth, while Pittsburgh, with an even break, moved to the plac evacated by the Cubs. Cincinnati still leads, but with a reduced percentage. Five teams gained in hitting with Boston the biggest gainer. Cincinnati and Chicago went into a tie in fielding.

Jones of Chicago has a courtesy lead among the pitchers with five games won and one lost, but as he had only figured in 68 innings the actual lead goes to Rixey of Cincinnati. Haines and Rhem of the Cardinals, Meadows of the Pirates and Donohue of Cincinnati are still among the leaders.

Kaysee Monarchs Win Over Wymore

WYMORE, Neb., July 17.—The Kansas City Monarchs, colored baseball team, defeated the Wymore American Legion club yesterday, 6 to 2. A crowd of two thousand witnessed the game. It was the second defeat suffered by the Wymore team this season.

JOHNSON LEADS IN STRIKEOUTS

King Walter Best In History In Art Of Setting Down Opposing Batters.

There are only two hurlers in the game today who have struckout 2,000 or more batsmen during the time they served in major league baseball. Walt Johnson, of course, leads with 3,354 made in 70 games. Grover Alexander run his string up to 2,012 this season. In the game today Dauss, Faber, Cooper, Adams, Bush, Grimes, Rixey and Shawkey have passed the 1,000 mark.

There have been but few hurlers in baseball who struckout 2,000 batsmen during their stay in big league baseball. Since the game has been organized, this following list of hurlers have achieved the feat: Johnson with 3,354.

Tim Keefe, with the Troy, Metropolitan and New York Giants from 1880 until 1894, fanned 2,856 batsmen.

Cy Young, in the 22 seasons he hurled ball in the big show, struck out 2,386.

Christy Mathewson set down 2,499 during the 16 seasons he was the star hurler of the New York club.

"Rube" Waddell in his ten strenuous seasons under the big tent fanned 2,301 men, an average of 230, which is the best record when based on average per year for all hurlers since the pitching distance was lengthened.

Ed Plank struck out 2,280 batsmen in the 17 seasons he crossfired big league batsmen.

John G. ("Wizard") Clarkson fanned 2,026 batsmen during the period he was wit hthe Chicago and Boston clubs of the National league from 1884 until 1894.

The latest to join this select circle is Grover Alexander with 2,012 so's in 15 seasons.

Helen Resumes Tennis Workout

NEW YORK, July 17.—(U. P.)—For the second time since she recovered from her operation, Miss Helen Wills, national tennis champion, engaged in a brief workout this afternoon on the courts at Forest Hills.

Her partner again was Paul Heston, assistant professional at the West Side tennis club, and he "fed" her shots for thirty minutes. The young champion put more power into her strokes than she did yesterday, but she remained in the forecourt, close to the net, and did not attempt much footwork.

Although the heat was intense and the exercise vigorous, Miss Wills was breathing easily when she returned to the club house, and she said she felt unusually good.

"I have not felt any kinds of pain and I slept better than ever last night after my first workout," she said.

"Of course, I am going to take it easy, but I hope to be able within another week to play at least a part of the real set."

Hartz Winner On Eastern Speedway In Record Time

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 17.—(U. P.)—Harry Hartz won the 120-mile classic at the Atlantic City speedway today and broke the world's record for cars with a 91-inch displacement.

Hartz covered the course in 58 minutes 20:50 seconds, and at an average speed of 123.4 miles an hour. Fred Comer was second, Norman Batten third and Phil Shafer fourth.

The best records these small racing cars have made in previous meets were from 117 to 119 miles an hour.

Hartz took the lead at the start of the race and never was headed although Cliffe Woodbury, who finished fifth, hung close to him for the first 71 laps.

Hartz won the 300-mile inaugural race here in May, nosing out Pete De Paolo, who was not in the class, this afternoon, being forced out of the preliminary sprint with engine trouble.

Gov. Al Smith Steals Spotlight From Coolidge At Paul Smith's

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., July 17.—(INS)—President Coolidge's summer camp is only four miles away, but so far as this mountain postoffice is concerned the date line for the week end is "at Smith's".

For the past ten days, every telegraph wire leading out of the Adirondacks has been filled with intimate details of the president's fishing activites and all the personal movements of the chief executive and his wife on their annual vacation.

Then along came Al Smith, governor of New York, to officially welcome President and Mrs. Coolidge to the Empire state. He and his party decided to spend the weekend in the mountains, and since their arrival public interest has declined insofar as Mr. Coolidge is concerned.

Natives of this state, who have twice returned the east side product as governor, are, for the time being, deserting the two mile road leading into the summer white house in favor of the hotel here where the Smith party is staying. Watchful and silent waiting at the gateway to White Pines camp has been supplanted by a constant round of ovations at Paul Smith's for Al.

Twice a week, President Coolidge has been journeying from his luxurious mountain home to Paul Smith's to receive the newspapermen. His arrival has occasioned mild interest among the summer vactionists. Yesterday Governor Smith arrived and for the two hours the road leading to this resort was lined with people eager for a glimpse of Governor Smith.

In large measure, the president himself is responsible for this temporary defection of popularity—at least according to the natives. The latter are irritated at the refusal of Mr. Coolidge to pose for pictures with their governor. They cannot understand it, and the situation is the principal topic of conversation in the hotel and in the camps in this vicinity.

MUSIC FEATURE OF STATE FAIR

Lincoln Elks and DesDunes Bands Among Free Attractions.

High Class Vaudeville, and Fireworks At Night On Program.

Some of the outstanding musical attractions and entertainment features which will help to make up the free entertainment program for the coming Nebraska state fair, September 5 to 10, were announced Saturday by Secretary George Jackson of the board of managers. Heading the list is Thaviu's band, which was here last year and won the unqualified favor of the crowds. This organization numbers fifty-four people, including eight grand opera singers and four dancers.

The Elks band of Lincoln, the Broken Bow band, and the Des Dunes colored band from Omaha, all of which have been heard at former state fairs, will be on hand again.

Several Musical Troupes.

There will be a number of musical troupes, other than bands, and high class vaudeville acts each day and evening, with a fireworks exhibition to wind up the evening program.

"We have tried to get the very best that was available in the entertainment and musical lines," said Secretary Jackson. "Thavitu's band is now in its twentieth year and has played before the most critical and exacting audiences from coast to coast. It won highest honors at the Panama-Pacific exposition and in San Francisco and has been filling an engagement this summer at the Philadelphia sesqui-centennial.

Needs No Introduction.

"The Elks band needs no introduction in Nebraska. It is one of a very few bands in Nebraska of which it can be said that each and every player is an artist selected from the highest ranks of amateur musicians. We are sure we made no mistake in engaging this wonderful aggregation for four days during the fair.

"The Broken Bow band has played the state fair before and comes recommended more highly than ever. This is the only out-state band engaged this year, which is a tribute to its high standing. We are sure everybody will be pleased with this organization because it plays the music people like to hear.

"Dan Des Dunes and his colored band of Omaha, is one of the fixtures of the Nebraska state fair. His organization has led thousands and thousands into the grandstand. In all his engagements with the satte fair we have never had one criticism.

"The Lomar troupe is one of the outstanding acts of this country and Europe, in fact it is one of the great European combinations that play nothing but state fairs and large theaters. It is what is called a smashing hit from London music halls.

"The Tacopi troupe consists of eight people, who are considered the the world's greatest catapulting acrobatic performers. Human being are tossed about like leaves in the wind in acts that seem impossible.

A Musical Sensation.

"Thomas Sarzatette is a comedy musical sensation, the last word in such acts. It gives brilliant and colorful programs of syncopated operatic and popular numbers.

"The Flying Brocks are in a class by themselves. There is nothing better in this country.

"The Lorenzo troupe, conquerors of the dizzy heights, seem to be courting death with every breath in their dazzling feats of skill and bravery.

"Many other acts of merit will be put on. There will be a complitee change of program each night, closing what Thearle-Duffields stupendous fireworks."

Walks Unconscious For Long Distance After An Accident

(Special to The Star.)

RAVENNA, Neb., July 17.—While speeding for home in hope of arriving before a nonconming storm, Dr. J. B. Conn overturned his car while trying to make a corner. The car rolled over and was so tightly wedged against a tree that the tree was cut down to release the car. In the meantime, the doctor, in an unconscious condition, had crawled from the wreck and walked a mile and a half to a farm, where he was found soaked with rain and battered by hail. The accident occurred about 11 o'clock Thursday night. The doctor is not much the worse for his experience, but has no recollection of the accident or his walk through the storm.

CRETE NOTES.

(Special to The Star.)

CRETE, Neb., July 17.—Crete has installed a system of stop buttons for the streets going into the two main streets East and West. Thirteenth and North and South Main.

Those from here were Misses Myrtle Benne, Nellie Dillion, Alice Boekel, Bernice Jones and Esther Parks; Mesdames Vit Jellnek, Hattie Mitchell, and Illinabeth Scott. Nearly all will go from there for their vacations. Crete club had the honor of doing the stunts for Nebraska.

Spanish War Veterans are to hold their annual picnic at Horbye's park Sunday. The day's program begins with flag raising at noon, followed immediately by the picnic dinner. Croquet-Golf Newest Sport At David City

(Special to The Star.)

DAVID CITY, Neb., July 17.—Adolph Preil, of David City, has utilized the spare ground in his back yard and has built a unique golf course. It is actually a combination of a croquet ground and golf links. The course consists of seven holes and par for it is nineteen. Instead of a set of clubs and several golf balls, all a player needs is a croquet mallet and ball. Holes about the size of the ball have been substituted for the arches. It is necessary to sink the ball before one can move on to the next hole.

Although the fairway has no artificial hazards the gentle slope of the ground may get the player into difficulty.

A big arc light has been put in over the course which enables the enthusiasts of this sport to play long after the setting sun has driven golfers off the links. The game's chief advantage over golf is its comparative cheapness.

Although this idea may not be original, Mr. Preil is the first one to put into use in David City. He is quite an enthusiast of this sport and declares that his course is open to the world as long as there is room to play. Par, nineteen, has been shot over the course several times but it has never been broken.

SAY WORK TRAIN IS NOT A TRAIN

Commission Makes Fine Distinction In Deciding Full Crew Question.

Brotherhohods Lose In Attempt to Force Railroad To Use Four Men.

A railroad derrick moving on the track by its own power and used for constructing and repairing bridges is not a "train" within the meaning of the Nebraska law, and for that reason it need not carry a crew of 5 men—engineer, fireman, conductor, and 2 brakemen—the state railway commission holds in dismissing a complaint brought some tibe ago by J. F. Moredick, on behalf of the brotherhood of railway trainmen, against the Burlington railroad.

This was a test proceeding initiated by the brotherhood to enforce strict compliance with the "full crews" act under which freight and passenger trains are operated. Evidence was presented by the brotherhood showing that the derrick had been sent out a number of times under regular train orders designating it as a "work extra train." The Burlington itself was alleged to have thus recognized it as a train.

Use Only Three Men.

Only 3 men have been used on the self-propelled derrick—an engineer, fireman and conductor. No brakeman is needed, since the brakes are operated by the engiiner from his cab. The brotherhood contended, however, that someone should accompany the derrick in order to place flag signals along the trackk to warn trains from both directions that they must stop. The flagging is now done by a workman on the bridge gang whom the foreman designates for that purpose, upon request of the derrick conductor.

Jurisdiction of the railway commission to pass upon the matter was denied by the railroad company, on the ground that the derrick is not utlized for purposes of transportation but solely to construct and repair bridges and tracks. The carrier participated in the hearing, nevertheless, and made a vigorous defense.

Define "Train."

In deciding whether or not a derrick that runs on its own motive power is a train, the commission consulted several dictionaries and found that they define the word "train" as meaning a continuous or connected line of cars on a railway, usually coupled with a locomotive A court decision was found declaring it to be "one aggregation of cars drawn by the same engine."

As against these citations, the brotherhood quoted the following paragraph from the operating rules of Nebraska carriers:

"Train—An engine, or motor, or more than one engine, or motor, coupled, without or without cars, displaying markers."

Notwithstanding this rather comprehensive classification, the railway commission holds that the Nebraska law, and not the railroad rules, is what governs. It finds itself unable to construe the law so as to make the word "train" cover a self-propelled derrick. The findings are as follows:

"A derrick is not a train; much less is it a freight train, for it transports no freight nor does it carry freight cars. It is an instrument used solely in the construction and repair of the company's property. The plain import of the statute does not include derricks under the term 'freight train.'

"Under the evidence there is nothing that would justify the commission in making an order requiring more operatives than are now employe on bridge derricks.

"The complaint must be dismissed."

Streetcar Strike In Indianapolis Is At Critical Stage

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 17.—(U. P.)—With the failure of a citizens' committee of fifty to induce a definite settlement among striking street car workers, the situation tonight had reached a climax which threatens an industrial war seige.

With police guarding every car, a normal service was maintained by men recruited since the strikers walked out July 5.

Meantime, attorneys representing the 450 union men on strike, and representatives of the Indianapolis Street aRilway Company fought verbal battles to reconcile the opposing sides.

NEW CHRYSLER A BIG SELLER

Great Number of Unfilled Orders Necessitates Greater Production.

Company Now Putting Out 500 Cars Every Twenty-four Hours.

In the first sixty days following its introduction, May 10, the public has paid more than $18,000,0000 for the new Chrysler "60." J. E. Fields, vice-president in charge of sales of the Chrysler Sales corporation announced yesterday. Unfilled orders aggfiregating several million dollars more have necessitated still larger production in an effort to catch up with the demand the car has created.

When the car was unveiled to the public, production was set at 350 cars a day after a careful study of market requirements. Within two week demand had caused an increase to 400. That was followed early in June by a second and third step-up, first to 425 and then to 450 per day. Late in June the figure was set at 500 for this one car.

Mr. Fields pointed out that Chrysler's policy of standardized quality and the features included in the car have combined to insure the overwhelming success it has attained. "Unit for unit in this car," he said, "the same standardized quality which is found in the "70" and Imeprial "80" is apparent—in engineering design, materials, craftsmanship, rigidity of test and inspection and in all characteristics which determine dependability and long life.

"Features of the "60" include 60 miles and more per hour; remarkable acceleration; extraordinary gasoline economy, exceeding 22 miles per gallon; typical Chrysler dynamic symmetry; astonishing riding ease and roadability; the safety of four wheel hydraulic brakes; oil filter and air cleaner; full pressure lubrication; seven-bearing crankshaft; impulse neutralizer; road levelizers front and rear, and roomy, luxurious bodies that combine the Chrysler characteristic of compactness."

Sales of other Chrysler models, particularly of the "7$" and Imperial "80," are also said to be at the highest point ever reached.

War Department Purchases Dodge Brothers Cars

The quartermaster general has awarded Dodge Brothers, Inc., a contract for ten sedans and seventy-six touring cars for army use in different parts of the United States. The cars are in every respect Dodge Brothers standard product.

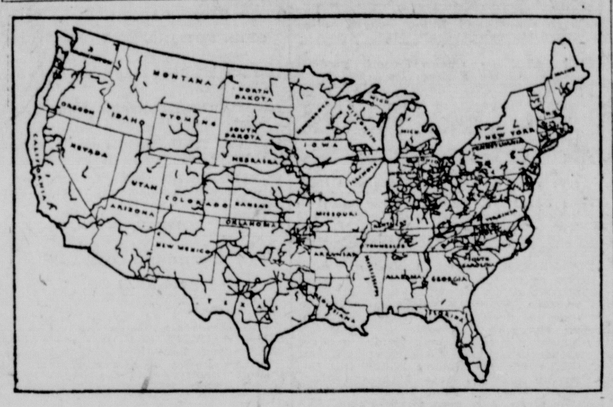

"The Dodge Brothers sedan and touring car have been approved as suitable for military service after severe practical tests and are the present standard five passenger cars for army purposes," said Maj. General C. F. Cheatham, in announcing the purchase.

"The Dodge Brothers cars have for a number of years been actually used in the United States Army, in Mexico, Europe, the island possessions, and within the continental limits of the United States, and found satisfactory for military ue.

Accelerator Efficiency.

Keep the connection of the accelerator control well oiled, so that the gas can be applied slowly without jerking the car. If oiling does not remedy it, examine the spring and rod adjustments for tension and leverage.

Automobile Bus Lines Now Run From Coast to Coast

With the rapid increase of new bus transportation companies and the lengthened route of cold companies, coast-to-coast travel by bus is now an accomplished fact.

The Studebaker Corporation of America, one of the leaders in this field as well as in passenger cars, has furnished busses to operators whose routes so connect that, with the exception of only 40 miles, it is now possible to travel from New York City to Los Angeles in Studebaker busses, as shown by the above map of Studebaker equipped bus lines.

Covering these connecting routes are more than two thousand Studebakers in bus service, averaging a total daily mileage of over a quarter of a million miles.

Over mountains, across the prairies of the central states, plowing through deserts on close schedule time, these modern-day carriers have come into their own as a reliable, comfortable means of travel.

Many of the routes covered by these Studebaker busses are over trails made famous by the pioneers. From Kansas City to Denver, part of the route is over the old "Covered Wagon" trails—covering in approximately 24 hours a distance that took the forty-niners weeks of dangerous travel.

Besides passenger service, scores of these Studebaker busses are in use for real estate development, traveling churches, school busses, theatrical tropes, private tours and lecture tours—bringing new convenience to the neglected, out-of-the-way hamlet and vastly reducing, with reliable transporation, the tedious distance between city and village.

In no way replacing steam and electric railways, these busses offer an additional method of transportation as well as reaching many points hitherto unreached by railways. In many instances rail companys are employing busses for the purpose of bringing in passengers from outlying points.

Chevrolet Makers Set Production Record In June

The gigantic manufacturing organization of the Chevrolet Motor company rose to new production heights during June when it built 77,241 passenger cars and trucks, a greater number of units than the company ever had produced in a single month.

No other manufacturer of modern three-speed transmission automobiles has approached this production which culminates a series of monthly production records established by Chevrolet.

The months of April and May of this year saw Chevrolet reach successive record production totals of 71,157 and 74,617, respectively. The new record established in June exceeds the May total by 2,624 units and dwarfs the production during June of 1925 by a margin of 22,295 units.

The aggregate production for the first half of 1926 was 384,573 cars and trucks. During the first half of 1926, Chevrolet's greatest year, the company produced 249,834 units, a total which was passed early in May of this year, which is 134,739 units less than the first six months of 1926 production.

The surprising growth of the Chevrolet Motor company is indicated by the fact that the production during the first half of 1926 equals the entire production during the first seven and one-half years in the company's history.

Details of the company's recently announced $10,000,000 expansion program are going forward and completion of this project will give the company a production capacity during the 1927 of one million Chevrolets.

Crankcase Oil Tells a Tale.

Examine the oil that is removed from the crankcase. It tells the story of the condition of the engine. Water in the oil indicates a faulty cylinder head gasket or a cracked head. Small particles of metal indicate undue wear on bearings or other working parts. If the oil looks at all out of ordinary, take a sample to the repair man for inspection.

YOUNG DRIVERS LIKE NEW MODEL

Speed and Pick-Up Of Willys-Knight "Seventy" Make It Popular.

After all the younger generation possesses a keen knowledge of motor car values. It is motor wise, critical and exacting in the various requirements of present day automobiles.

This was interestingly revealed recently in a check-up made by Willys-Overland retail salesmen and field men in an effort to gain the opinion of the younger set relative to speed, pick-up and appearance of automobiles. This was furthered by an unusual demand for Willys-Knight "Seventies" especially noticeable during the last 30 days in the youthful buying field.

With thousands of college men and co-eds retired for the summer months from school terms, seeking diversion on highways and open spaces the company felt great increase in demand for the "Seventy" models.

It was established that the younger motor car purchasers have made clear a decided trend toward the car with speed, appearance, getaway. The entire field of youthful purchasers is turning to a car which is responsive in acceleration, durable in maintaining speeds above 50 miles an hour and powerful beyond common need.

A recent test of the "Seventy" shows that this car, powered with the famous Knight sleeve valve motor, is capable of attaining a speed of 25 miles per hour from a starting speed of five miles per hour in less than eight seconds. At the same starting speed during this test, a speed of 40 miles per hour was attained in less than 15 seconds. This indicates plainly the responsiveness of this model. Following the flexibility test the car was put to a severe road speed grilling during which it maintained a speed between 62 and 67 miles per hour with the same ease and comfort as if driven at a lower rate.

POLICE APPROVE STEEL CAR BODY

Report On Accident Prevention Contains Tribute to Dodge.

Approval of all steel automobile body construction was expressed by all but 84 out of approximately 500 police chiefs interviewed on the subject of highway accidents and their prevention, according to a statement in a recent issue of the Literary Digest.

These police chiefs from all parts of the country were interviewed in the making of a survey which was submitted to the Second National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, held recently in Washington under the supervision of Secretary of Commerce Hoover.

As quoted in the Digest, Harold D. Buttenheim, editor of The American City Magazine, in submitting the results of the survey to the conference, said:

"The last question dealt specifically with lowering the fatalities by constructing closed car bodies of steel on the same safety principie as the all steel railway coach. All but eighty-six answers this affirmatively. A number of the chiefs were decidedly emphatic in their answers relating experiences of their which indicated conclusively that in the wrecks involving all steel bodies they had found the strength of steel had saved the lives of passengers.

"This is a sincere tribute to Dodge Brothers, the first automobile manufacturers to recognize the strength and safety of the all steel body," said the Lincoln dealer, in commenting on this article. The all steel body is destined within a few years, I believe, to replace the wood framed automobile body just as certainly as the all steel railway coach and the all steel steamship have replaced those made of wood."

AUTO NOTES.

From 18 to 24 miles are attainable from gas with four-cylinder cars of moderate weight. Six-cylinder cars of ordinary weight makes from 14 to 18 miles, and with eights, from 10 to 14.

When greasing the car, examine leaves of the springs in the center, as a break will throw the strain on next leaf. Keep the spring tight to prevent breaking springs.

Worn cylinders and piston rings allow the compression to pass into the crankcase, and cause the engine to use more oil. The worn rings will not wipe off the excess oil.

Equip the car with only the best spark plugs. A good plug will often last from 20,000 to 30,000 miles, while a cheap and poor plug will yield but 1000, and sometimes even less.

Rear springs that allow the frame to hit the bumper when going over an unusual chuckhole should be examined. They probably need resetting to place them in their original condition.

Members of State League Work With Questionnaires To Get Out The Vote At August Primaries

That politics is not a mere pastime, but a serious crusade to the League of Women Voters is being demonstrated these weeks at its headquarters.

Everyday in spite of the heat and the lure of golf and picnics a group of women meet to tabulate replies to the questionnaire which has been sent out by their organization to all the candidates of state wide interest who are to be selected a the coming primary election, August 10.

Among those to be found at the headquarters is Mrs. Charles H. Dietrich of Hastings, president of the Nebraska League of Women Voters, who has cut short her vacation in the mountains to assist with the questionnaire and the "Get out the Vote." The following facts were given out by her in an interview, yesterday.

"Only 20 per cent of the possible electors voted at the primary elections in 1924," said Mrs. Dietrich, "I believe many conscientious persons do not vote in the primaries because they have no means of making an intelligent selection among those who file for office. They know nothing of the personality or views of the majority of the candidates. It has seemed a very serious matter to the League of Women Voters tat only a small minority of the electors choose the candidates to come up in th efinal election. A primary election seems to us equally important if not indeed more important than the final election, and yet we fully appreciate the position of those who hesitate to cast an ignorant vote.

"It is for the purpose of helping to supply unpartisan, accurate information to conscientious voters," continued Mrs. Dietrich," that the league as circularized al condidates with a series of questions to contended to bring out suc facts about their lives, experience, and opinions as women voters would wish to possess.

State Platform.

"We ask all candidates a series of personal questions such as age, where born, how long they have been in Nebraska, what education and previous experience they have had which would fit them for positions which they seek. Questions follow which give the candidates an

Young People Have New Form Entertainment

One often wonders if the young people of today never tire of their constant search for "something different."

At least one of their latest occupations seems to be a harmless one and though it doesn't go so well with that ever present cry of "dieting" still it is rather a wholesome sight to see a group of young people sitting down to a farm house table literally loaded with good things to eat.

This newest form of entertainment is to call up a farm home near Lincoln, and order "dinners for twelve, eighteen or twenty, whichever it may be.

A twenty-mile drive only heins to enhance the appetite and the lack of formal service at the table is a part of the fun.. It is rather fun to watch a group of people from some of Lincoln's most fastidious homes, sitting with fried chicken, old fashioned "cold slaw" made with cream, mashed potatoe and chicken gravy, string beans, plum conserve, currant jelly, freshly baked rolls, spiced beets, homemade sausage, freshly cooked pineapple, custard pie and sugar cookies with cup after cup of coffee throughout the whole meal.

And not once did you hear a word about calories. They just ate, and in between, not courses but time, a few of the more hilarious ones got up and ran around the table to be able to get down a little bit more as in came another platter of chicken heaped high.

And after the dinner a stroll down the meadow to watch the opportunity to state their particular platforms. Many candidates run because they have some reform in which they are particularly interested. We want to know what it is.

"Candidates for governor and lieutenant-governor are asked two questions on law enforcement, the first in regard to prohibition, the other more general. Candidates for the legislature are asked questions to bring out their views about measures in which women in the state are especially concerned;—jury service for women, support of the Sheppard-Towner act, the child labor amendment, a state wide tenure and retirement law for teachers. their opinion about the present system of caring for the aged poor on county farms, would they favor a uniform method of accounting and reporting by county officers, how they propose to provide adequate housekeeping for the new capitol.

"Candidates for congress are asked whether they will support the present federal laws for prohibition enforcement with no weakening of the Volstead Act, and if they favor extension of Civil Service to employes of prohibition enforcement, whether they would oppose proposals to make the amendment of the federal constitution more difficult, and whether they favor a federal department of education and the continuation of work for the promotion of the welfare of maternity and infancy.

"'The League of Women Voters is concerned deeply in getting out the vote at every election," said Mrs. Dietrich, "but we are even more concerned with raising the quality of the vote. We are striving to make women not only voters but thoughtful and enlightened voters who take their best judgment and conscience with them t othe polls."

Among the Lincoln women working at the headquarters tabulating replies to the questionnaire are: Miss Ida Robbins, Mrs. E. M. Forsyth, Mrs. Larry A. Becker, Mrs. W. LeRoy Davis; Miss May Gund, and the new executive secretary, Miss Harriett Batterton.

Mid-Summer Days Are Time For Planning Activities of Clubs

The mid-summer days are here; the days that foster lassitude and good-for-nothing-ness, when eating, sleeping, resting from the desirable thing. Most of Women's club activities have ceased to function, according to appearances, but the hard work of the year is going on where few see or realize. Committees are busy with pencil and brain framing a program for the coming year, engaging talent, making assignments and doing the many other things necessary to outlining a good year's work.

Somebody? Yes, many bodies are keeping busy during these torrid days an dthe result will be enjoyed later on by all; next year the season will, no doubt, present more satisfying programs than ever before, as they will be more helpful in every way. All of the old clubs of Lincoln and th yeounger ones, too, are included in the number. Those women's organizations which study the policies of legislation are putting in full time; the Lincoln and State League of Women voters belong to this class and the Business and Professional club have chosen the mid-summer for their national conference and the forming of "Better business principles for a better business world." But regardless of the nature of the work pursued a representative committee is busy behind the scenes.

CANARY CLUB HOLDS ITS REGULAR MEETING.

The Nebraska Pedigreed Roller Canary club was entertained Monday evening at the home of Mrs. F. J. Harrison, 426 East Eighth street, College View. Refreshments were served.

BIRD CLUB HONORS INTERNATIONAL HEAD.

The Lincoln Canary Breeders association entertained at cards Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Clarke, in honor of Mrs. Nellie Hassler of Berkeley, Cal., who is the head of the International Canary Breeders' association. Miss Nellie Weldon, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Little, Mrs. C. D. Supperger were the high score players.

Mrs. Anna Zinnecker served a delicious luncheon.

ALTRUSA CLUB ENJOYS PICNIC AT PARK.

Twelve members of Altrusa club enjoyed a picnic Mnoday evening at "Kil Kair," Miss Genevieve Buncher's cabin in Epworth park. Because of the late afternoon rain, supper was served indoors, cafeteria style. Regular meetings are discontinued during the summer and the picnic was one of the vacation activities arranged by Miss Barbara Osborn's committee.

GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY HOLDS REGULAR MEETING.

The Nebraska Genealogical society will hold the regular quarterly meeting, Friday, with a 12:00 o'clock luncheon at the chamber of commerce, followed by a talk at 1:30 on "Eastern Genealogical Libraries" by Mrs. C. H. Jenkines and an illustrated talk on "The Use of the Genealogical Chart" by Mrs. C. R. Peterson.

NEBRASKA W. C. T. U. SENDS QUESTIONAIRE.

The Nebraska Woman's Christian Temperance union sent the following questionnaire to all candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General and congress:

Do you believe in the eighteenth amendment and its enforcement?

Do you think the Volstead Act should be modified or strengthened?

Do you favor an appropriation sufficient to make enforcement of law possible?

The union will not issue a "satisfactory list of candidates" but will publish the facts as compiled from the answers, in the state papers and people may make their own choice.

Following is the letter to candidates:

"It is not our intention to take sides as an organization between two dry candidates, but we should like individually to give preference to those who observe the law as well as endorse it. If you care to state in your reply whether or not you personally observe the law, we would be glad to have you do so.

Iva M. Innis, vice president.
Agnes D. Roberts, treasurer.
Mary Lee Seibert, corresponding secretary.

Parent-Teacher Ass'n

Mrs. George H. Wentz returned the past week from Philadelphia, where, as president of the state Parent Teachers association, she attended the national board of managers of the Congress of Parents and Teachers which met in Philadelphia.

"Know the Child" was the slogan chosen for the coming year and "Educational Significance of the Parent Teacher association," the general theme. Mrs. Wentz brought back the following report:

Miss Mary McSkimmons, president of the National Education association in her address, made the statement that "the Parent-Teacher association was the greatest ally the schools had ever had."

Mrs. Hugh Bradford, president of the California association, in her talk to the assembly said in part—"the Parent-Teacher movement is the most heralded movement of today, for it had been accepted as the greatest factor in the greatest work, "child welfare." Running parallel and co-operating with the schools of the United States, bringing together the forces of home and school. It has been recognized as a tremendous force educationally, not only in our country but internationally as well. Of the twenty-two nations of which our Child Welfare Magazine has come in contact, nine of the governments have requested assistance in establishing a similar line of work in their countries for the welfare of children and the instruction of those upon whom it so largely depends."

A very important prrt of the program was the reports of the various department chairman, bureau managers and chairmen of committees, of the work that has been accomplished and plans of the work for the coming year.

Of special interest was the report of Dr. D. A. Thom of Boston, Mass., director of mental hygiene.

Dr. Thom said that the responsibility for the mental condition of the child rests with the parents and teachers and should not be delegated to any one else, if it must be delegated to others, it should be well supervised.

"Our children are symptoms of ourselves," said Dr. Thom, "and if they develop conditions that are not desirable, we must set about to correct these conditions in ourselves. The home has the greatest influence in moulding the character of the child, having almost the entire responsibility from one to five years, the most impressionable years of the child's whole life. There is a tendency on the part of many parents of today to farm out the child, much the same as a family washing, and in so doing the parents are shirking their responsibility.

"Never debate the inferiorities of the child before others, he will get the idea that he is different from other children which will be a hindrance to him in after life.

The child that is shy, quiet, and is commended for being a good child, is the one to be alarmed about rather than the noisy, active child. The former is likely to be the dependent one as he grows older."

Dr. Thom approves in the giving of rewards to children, if the reward requires the working out of a definite, constructive program and not retaliation.

The report by J. W. Faust, director of recreation, was very interesting. Mr. Faust advises that families set aside one evening each week for play evening, every member of the family taking part and that dad, mother and children take turns planning the games for the evening sport. He also advises one day a month for a family excursion if it is only a very short distance from home. Mr. Faust has found the outdoor fireplace a great source of enjoyment for the family, the sport of games around the fireplace often lasting far into the winter months.

The report of the "Summer Round-up" of children entering first grade of school in September as near 100 per cent in health as possible, shows a registration of 42 states with a total of 1258 local associations. Nebraska has 42 local associations carrying on the work.

TAKE YOUR TROUBLES TO MINERVA

Can Any Among You Prove That a Bachelor Can Hold a Candle to a Married Man As An Asset to the Community? — Anti-Bachelor Arguments Presented — Danger Of One Wild Animal Loose Is Not Lessened By Unchaining Another.

Many Excuses.

Countless excuses have been offered by the ancient order of bachelorhood for their state of single bliss (or misery, if you prefer.) Some are victims of lost ideals or blighted love. They can't love twice. Others have family burdens too great to take on more. Some don't like women. Women don't like some. So on ad infinitum.

But nary a one of these excuses can make a dent in the anti-bachelor armor of a "Suffering Sister-in-law." She is for taxing them so heavily that they can't afford to be single; forcing them in one way or another to assume their duty to society. Of course, if any one can prove that a bachelor can hold a candle to a married man as an asset to his community, she may dismiss the case. So—on with your witnesses, let us proceed with the trial.

Dear Minerva: What is your candid opinion of bachelors? This letter is going to give you mine. I am the wife of a moderately successful business man. I am not yet thirty-five, but I have given the world five children of whom I am proud. Besides being a wife and mother, I am the sister-in-law of two of the most self-important bachelors that ever made life miserable for a brother's wife. One is just my age, the other ten years older.

It seems they have appointed themselves as my special advisers in more ways than one. First, they drop in just any time they choose—all hours of the day and night. They hold forth on how I should raise my children and tell me constantly I nagg too much to be asuccessful mother. They say I should study child psychology and learn the inner working of children's minds—as if I had time. They say I don't understand my own children.

The impudence of it. Two unmarried men who have evaded life's responsibilities trying to tell me, the mother of five, how to educate my hostages to fortune.

I fail to see where such men as they are of any benefit to society whatsoever. I'm for taxing bachelors so high that they will be forced either to do their bit by marrying and raising families, or else to assume the largest share of the burden of supporting our public institutions. Why shouldn't they, instead of leaving it to men with wives and children to drain their pocketbooks

I wish your readers would take up this subject and discuss it. I know a lot of them will think I'm only bitter because of my brothers-in-law. But they are not my only reason for belief in bachelor taxation. I think I have made that clear.

When they get through their harangue on children they start in on the modern woman. You ought to hear those two rave. "No wonder we are single. Who wants to marry a painted, bob-haired cigarette hound and live on canned beans and baker's bread? If there were a few old-fashioned women in the world we might take a chance—but the modern dame with her tobacco breath and her cocktails. Single bliss for us."

I wonder when they are talking how they happen to know so much about women. And while they are damning the cigarette smoking women they are puffing away on cigarettes themselves like the lords of creation they think they are. They have their drinks too, believe me.

Now Minerva, I don't smoke, but I claim I have as good a right to as they have, and that no girl wants to marry a tobacco breath any worse than a man does. My younger sister smokes and wears extreme styles and too much lipstick. But she is a lovely girl. They never mention her directly but I know she is included in their condemnation of modern girls. I wear paint and powder but not to excess. And I consider it my own affair anyway, and not that of some hard-boiled bachelor to tell me what to do.

My husband is entirely different from his brothers. I believe that marriage is responsible. It's the only normal state, and the more I see of my bachelor brothers-in-law, the stronger my opinion.

If you and your readers can advance any sound reason why single men past a certain age should not be taxed; or any sensible reason why they should not marry and shoulder part of the world's responsibilities, please advance it.

My older brother-in-law was in love and his sweetheard died. He says she was an ideal woman and that he can never love another. But what if everyone remained chained to dead ideals? What would become of the race? One can love again, I believe, and if not, there have been successful marriages based on mutual respect.

Keep up the good work, Minerva. I always enjoy your sensible column. A suffering Sister-in-law.

A. My opinion of bachelors is much like my opinion of spinsters, married men, married women, children, dogs cats, houses and so forth. There are some that do not appeal to me so much. Others I find most fascinating. That is, I suppose, because we cannot fairly judge a species by a specimen. And bachelors are like all things else. They vary. And aren't you pretty hard on your own sex-wishing your "treasured" relatives on them?

The Monogamous Sex.

Dear Minerva: There was once a sentiment called love, that tacked to monogamous sex attraction, made of woman a model wife, mother or citizen. Monogamy was her profession. Man said so, and it sounded good to him. In the main she lived up to it, not without uneasiness and misgivings, for some aeons of time. In the meanwhile, a few brave pioneer souls put out an investigating thought. This thought gathered discipiles, the disciples gathered momentum. Action followed, and expanded into demands. Laws followed, which expressed today, read economic freedom.

Economic freedom liberated woman from the shackles of an old order, and she stands today a self-governing lady—freed from the dominion of tyranny. The new age for women is here and man opposes it yet in mighty numbers. She is a menace to his opinions and his freedom. His definitions and traditional concepts must forsooth lose weight and measurement on the scale of equal privileges. He is still very much upset over her independence. Home and fireside have almost become fables. She is not there waiting with his slippers in one hand and a skillet in the other and a monogamous smile on her lips—to cater to his creature comforts.

To this plaint he adds "How can she expect fidelity from me?" and sinks into morose introspection, forgetting that the quality of high virtue with which he baits his hook, has not been a noticeable prize of her domestic days. Well, what has happened? Nothing less dramatic than that her brain has begun to function, and he finds, even as he speaks, that her mind has wandered to more engrossing interests. Shall I say that man is suffering from his own conception of honor, love, home and family? Perhaps, but only as a by-product.

Isn't this so, men? No-Cheer.

A. I would gather that you are stinct is not confined to any one gender although it has formerly been believed to belong exclusively to man. Handicaps, not innate virwoman's place on the pedestal, you say. But times are changing.

So they are. And I believe in the single standard, all right, all right. But I claim that the danger of one wild animal romping in the dooryard is not lessened by unchaining another and allowing him to run rampant also.

Would Erect Barriers.

Dear Minerva: I cannot understand why you and some of your readers continue to judge "Virtuous Wife" so harshly, and make a heroine of the lax-principled woman who defrauded the wife she told us about. It seems almost incredible. I think that if that usurper had been the woman of fine and noble character that "Virtuous Too" seeks to have us believe, that that regretable affair would never have happened, for in the first place a woman of fine and noble character would, even if she realized that she was falling in love with a married man, put up barriers that would effectually keep him from progressing in his love-making. She would have stepped aside out of the wife's path, knowing herself to be an interloper and trouble-maker. She would have effaced herself from the man's life, knowing that it was her place to make the sacrifice of giving him up. And she would have unselfishly acknowledged the prior rights of the wife, and reminded the man of his vows and obligations. But the sequel shows that she did nothing of the kind. It shows that she was selfish and weak, lacking in self control, and lacking, too, in principle. She was not overburdened with respect for law, and she selfishly put herself first, and the wife's rights last. She proved herself dishonest, in that she took what legally belonged to another woman. She proved herself unscrupulous in making it easy for him to be lured away, to be unfaithful to his married vows. For that is all it amounts to, Minerva. He broke his vows, was unfaithful to the wife he had sworn to love and honor and protect, hurled defiance at the laws of man, and broke two of the laws of God. ("Thou shalt not covet," and "Thou shall not commit adultery.") That certainly could not have been very honorable behavior toward his wife. And Minerva, do not forget that the wife was magnanimous enough to forgive him if he would give up his immoral life, but to that his answer was that he would fight to divorce her. The wife was the most magnanimous of the two.

The usurper may have loved him, but she trampled another woman's rights underfoot, and rode, rough shod, and mercilessly, over another woman's happiness. She built her nest out of the wreck of another woman's home. She may have been a sort of modern Cleopatra to hold him for twenty years, but neither her love nor Cleopatra charms can erase the label of adultery from her action. Naturally after her child arrived, she would want to hold him, knowing he meant bread-and-butter to herself and child. She unbread was buttered on, and knew she had won a fine "meal ticket" for the rest of her life. It is easy, apparently, for some women of mercenary make-up to love the man who pours out costly gifts at their feet, especially when those gifts include luxurious nests. Can you not see, Minerva, that self-interest, or selfishness, might have been the chief reason she hung onto him for twenty years? "Virtuous too" speaks of her having "unselfishly and lovingly" become the mother of his children. But in the twenty years there was only one child, and that one child was undoubtedly a mere accident. The fact that there was only the one child born to this illicit union proves that the woman was not so unselfish. She was selfish enough to dodge motherhood after the birth of the one accident. And how could he make the suggestion that his legal wife should let him "adopt the child into the family" if the legal wife was not the mother of more than one child, or if he was not living with her? If he had utterly deserted her, as you take for granted, it was pretty nervy of him to ask the deserted wife to let him adopt the illegitimate child into the family.

You know, Minerva, that it is an easy enough thing for a selfish and unscrupulous woman to flatter a man and bold him in her net, winding him around her little finger. It has been done countless times, if the records of history are true. Cleopatra did it, and she wasn't a beauty either, according to the report. The favorite wife of Brigham Young did it, and she was neither beautiful nor charming, just a sharp-nosed red-haired woman who was shrewd enough to know how to keep Brigham at her feet, feather her own nest, and lord it over the rest of his wives.

There may have been just as much self-interest as love in the motive that prompted this woman to keep her hold on another woman's husband for twenty years. The thought of giving up her snugly feathered nest would be distasteful to her, if the man had created a separate establishment for her, and there may have been an unconfessed under-current of cowardice that whispered to her that it was easier to be a "clinging vine" in the lap of luxury than anything else. Most "vamps" are of the clinging vine variety, and their "love" endures as long as there is a fool to be parted from his money, but if wealth takes wing, the dear "soul-mate" usually forgets that she ever loved the man. It's the exceptional case when she doesn't forget.

But even granting that the redeeming quality of love was mixed with self-interest in this woman's case, and that her's is an individual case, where did Jesus ever give us to understand that adultery was not a sin? Where did he ever make it clear that because a home was already overshadowed with discord an outsider had a right to enter and widen the breach?

Why not answer some of the questions asked by "Virtuous Wife" in her letter? Question No. 1 was "Has the old idea of sin and punishment therefor, and the honor that should be paid to the righteous living, gone altogether out of fashion?" From the replies of some of your readers it would seem that virtue has become a vice, and vice a virtue. Also that it is an unlovely and uncharitable thing to hate filth and sin. (But quite fashionable to hate and condemn virtuous wives.)

Question No. 2 was: "If the bad woman is to have the same rights and privileges as the good,—if her children are to be given an honorable name, and if she herself after a life of immorality, is to be raised to the standing of a legal wife, what is the use of trying to teach virtue" Is this the commencement of a new era in which we shall subtly teach our daughters that love makes adultry praiseworthy, and removes the blackness from dishonor?

I think the criticism of "Virtuous Wife" was unjustifiably harsh because she was no more guilty of harsh and cruel judgement than others have been who so harshly and cruelly judged her. She had a right to call sin by its proper name, for Jesus did the same. He never said the woman taken in adultery was not guilty, nor did He tell her she had not sinned. What He called sin we may also call sin. Certainly we do not want to make it easy for others to sin by condoning sin ourselves. Good cannot come out of evil. Do let us try to be fair to "Virtuous Wife," and concede to her the same right to express her opinions and judge,—yes, judge,—that we claim for ourselves. And no one can deny that she has been judged. You may say "Judge not," do you judge? Yes, indeed you do, just as if you could read every thought of the human heart like God Himself. But perhaps, if you could exchange places with the wronged wife "Virtuous Wife" told about, you would agree with the cartoonist that "It's different when it happens to you."

A virtuous wife is a crown to her husband, (if he has sense enough to know it,) and her price is far above rubies. So Solomon said. And to "Virtuous Too," let me say that a woman who knows herself to be virtuous certainly has a right to say so in this modern day of the wives who "remain normal for lack of opportunity to be otherwise" must surely be few in number.

From the philosophy of a friend I wrote the following in my notebook:—"There is no blessing vouchsafed to man that will compare with the pure and unselfish love of a virtuous woman. It has oftimes lifted a moral and physical wreck from the gutter and made a man of him, something to look upon and be proud. But the love of an impure woman is as a corroding poison. The closer she clings to you and the better she loves you the deeper and deeper you sink into the mire which will sooner or later envelope you."

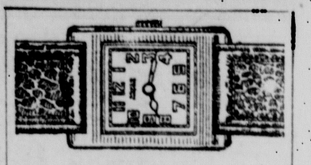

That is admitting that impure women experience love and exhibit faithfulness to the object of their love just the same as pure women do. But pure women refrain from causing unhappiness to other women, and pure women do not accept the love o fmarried men, nor become their mistresses.

There is only one thing the woman in the scase could do that would make me elevate her to the pedestal of a heroine. If she were to renounce her hold upon the man, and go to the wife and say "I have realized the sin I committed against you when I alienated your husbands' love and widened the breach between you. Forgive me. I will never cross his path again,"—then I would think she was a woman of "mighty fine" character, and one of earth's heroines. Ardent.

Dear Minerva: You are interested in physical development and good health. Will you give me some exercises which will make me more graceful. I am a business girl and spend the greater number of the hours every day in sitting by my typewriter. I would like something to make me more supple and graceful. DANA.

A. Nothing is better for this purpose than daily practice of esthetic dancing exercises and steps. I am outlining for you today a few simple movements which may be used as a daily dozen:

BEFORE HER BABY CAME

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Adkins, Texas.—"Before my baby came I was so weak I had to stay in bed most of the time until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My mother-in-law, who is a midwife, told me it was all foolishness for me to stay in bed. She told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it would help me. She handed me one of your little books and I read it and was interested in it. I went to a drug store that night and got a bottle of your wonderful medicine. I took it until the baby was born and was able to be up and do my work. Baby is 4½ months old now and weighs 14 pounds. I have plenty of milk for her and she gains steadily. I recommend it. I am willing to answer letters and will do anything I can for any woman, for I know how I suffered."—Mrs. A. H. Tschirhart, R. No. 2, Box 39, Adkins, Texas.

Morning Thought

WITH his first instructions in a new trade, an apprentice begins to correct his thinking. He tries to dismiss his careless thoughts about the thing that he is doing, and to think careful thoughts; he attempts to exchange his ignorant thoughts for thoughts of wisdom and understanding. He is seeking perfection and he knows that only perfect thoughts will bring perfection. One good, strong thought brings a chain of good thoughts and, ere long, what seemed a difficult task becomes clear and easy. Thus the apprentice gains wisdom and by this process becomes master of his trade.

We are all apprentices in the business of life. To learn to live requires much study, great patience, it requires faith in the ultimate attainment, faith so strong that we are glad to keep trying to summon right thoughts and to banish careless ones. There comes a time when the effort ceases to be a burden and becomes a joy. We then tell error thoughts to get out, as impersonally as we would send the dust before the broom. We do not consider them our individual thoughts but we see them in the light of unwelcome thought visitors that disturb our menal and spiritual households and keep desirable thought visitors away. Then we begin to live, to love and prosper.

The La Zare Method

By the La Zare method of permanent waving you get a wave that hugs the head like a marcel. You need no combs to set it, no professional services to keep it tidy or pretty. Mr. La Zare himself, an expert from New York, will give you a permanent wave for $12.50. Or you can have one of his experienced operators give you a permanent for $10. Mr. La Zare says that not a single person has been dissatisfied with their waves but his clients are sending their friends.

At the La Zare Beaute Shoppe 335 National Bank of Commerce, 13th and O streets, you are given a shampoo free with each marcel. Call B4690 for an appointment.

Furs Are Economical

Monday morning, Aug. 2, one of loveliest arrays of fur garments ever offered to Lincoln women, will go on sale at Cadwallader's, 1010 Q street. And fur garments are much less expensive than cloth since they last years longer, they are warmer and far more elegant. You pay less for furs in August.

Mrs. Breen's Plan

Mrs. Breen is leaving this week for eastern points. She will return in two weeks with not only new ideas but with the ultra-smart hat models. She will also select the models for the new French room at Orkin's which will be opened to Lincoln women in the near future.

Shoes For Fall Season

A forecast of appropriate shoe types for specific occasions is set forth in a booklet entitled "Sidelights on the Style Review, 1926" published in connection with the New England Shoe and Leather Exposition and Style Show in Boston. The occasion idea is the predominating note of this exposition, and sidelights here recorded further carry it out. The staple types are not included in the booklet, which rather places emphasis on certain of the newer types. Following is a condensed outline of the information as it pertains to women's footwear:

Business Woman—Three strap in patent leather, black and brown kid, suede and Russia calf.

Shopping—Front gore in fine brown kid with buckle or bow.

Matinee, Bridge, Tea—Colored kids in conservative blends, colored suedes, particularly dark brown, simple patent leather with one-strap. White leathers have all-year-round demand.

Informal Dinner—Simple strap types and pumps, in black materials.

Sub-Deb—Simple lines, graceful heel, which is not too high. Avoid sophisticated materials.

The Importance of Hose

It is impossible, in this day of short skirts, to exaggerate the importance of hose. They must be the right shade. The short skirts demand that they be silk to the top. Fashion demands that they be of fine quality. For indeed, what garment is more in evidence now-days than the hose! For price, quality and shade you cannot beat the Hole-Proof hose and you will find them in all sizes and colors at Ben Simon and Sons. The silk-to-the-top with lisle hem lining, reinforced where the wear is greatest on the foot, and priced at $2 is the best buy. They will outwear many other hose and are beautiful to the last.

Those Wide, Wide Waves

Have the wide, wide waves been calling you? I mean the wide, soft permanent waves. Then I suggest that you consult Miss Rose in the beauty parlor at Ben Simon and Sons for that is the kind she gives on their new model Nestle Circuline machine. Never a kink or a twisty curl that makes one wish the hair were straight. Never an uneven part to break the finished wave. Always the best service and the best results when Miss Rose permanently curls your hair. And you can charge it.

Our Treasures

Is there a thing we treasure more than a remarkable likeness of father and mother, in our reflective moods. If you will stop at Hauck's studio, 1216 O street, and look at some of their studies you will agree with me that there is something almost human about the "reliefs" and the expressions.

Man and the Gentleman

While man mocks at and makes fun of another,
The gentleman is unmoved, serious and quiet.
While man complains of the faults of his fellow man,
The gentleman understands and weighs man in his mind.
While man lays bare the weakness of another.
The gentleman covers it with the veil of his graciousness.
While man does not mind causing disturbance to another.
The gentleman takes care lest he may hurt any man.
While man tries to take all comfort for himsel,
The gentleman thinks first of his neighbor.
While man has done some great things and boasts of it it with pride.
The gentleman covers it beneath the mantle of his modesty.
While man takes offense at the slightest cause.
The gentleman is polite in every situation in life.

Summer Luncheons

What is nicer for a summer luncheon than Welsh Rarebit Toast, made of Gooch's Best bread. And the reason I recommend Gooch's is because such care is taken in the making and in the selection of materials, that there cannot be an inferior morsel in a single loaf. So here is my recipe for Rarebit Toast, made with Gooch's Best bread.

4 slices toast, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, ½ pound cheese, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1-8 teaspoon of mustard, 12 stuffed olives.

Melt butter, add flour, stirring constantly. When thoroughly blended, add seasonings (salt, paprika and mustard). Add milk stir until mixture boils. Put over hot water as in double boiler or chafing dish. Add cheese; beat until cheese is all melted and the mixture is creamy. Do not allow the mixture to boil after the cheese is added. Pour over the slices of toast. Garnish with the olives which should be cut in thin slices, thus making little circles of green and red for decoration. This recipe will serve four people.

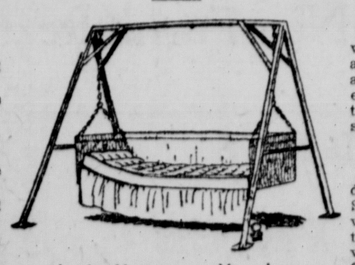

Summer Luncheons Are Delicious and Informal if the Proper Breads, Toasts and Drinks are Served.

Super-Service

There are several places in Lincoln, where the service surpasses neighboring places of far greater population, but for super-service I'd like to know who can beat the Lincoln Mattress Company. Out of town folks put their mattresses in the back of the car, drive to Lincoln, leave the mattress with the Lincoln Mattress Co., do their shopping and attend to their business affairs. When they are ready to leave for home in the afternoon they stop at the Lincoln Mattress Co., and take home a brand new mattress made from their old one.

Not only bed mattresses are renovated and made new, recovered and re-stuffed, but the mattresses for couches, porch swings and everything that requires a mattress. Lincoln folks call B2828 and give their order. The driver calls for the mattress in the morning and delivers it in the afternoon if the need is urgent.

A comfortable, fat, clean mattress brightens one's outlook, rests the fatigued body and prepares it for the coming day's work.

Is the Mattress on Your Lawn or Porch Swing Soft, Bright and Pretty?

Dear Readers:

Will you hold a happy thought for me for the next two weeks while I am vacationing at the lakes and in the north woods? I shall not be able to shop for you, but I shall stop in Chicago and other places and try to bring back some good news, some new ideas and plenty of enthusiastic interest in your fall apparel.

Your Horoscope

LEO-LION-HEART: July 21, to Aug. 21. You are passive in disposition with a great love for flowers and art. You are too sensitive and often suffer hurt feelings when no hurt was intended. You are most congenial with Pisces (Feb. 17 to Mar. 21), Capricorn, (Dec. 22, to Jan. 18), Aquarius (Jan. 18 to Feb. 17), Gemini, (Mar. 23 to June 22), Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 23), and Taurus, (Apr. 23 to May 23). Yours is a barren sign, unfavorable to growth of seed or transplanting. A splendid sign for destroying weeds.

Beauty and Comfort

Women have worn Cantilever shoes because they were comfortable and because they are so perfectly built that they correct foot trouble. But the late models of Cantilever shoes are not only comfortable, serviceable and corrective, but are really beautiful—if you can call shoes beautiful. They are built on the same wonderful lasts as always, but the models are smarter than ever before. The oxfords, in combination leathers, are the last word in sports wear. The three strap pumps have style yet they are so built as to hold their shape. The Cantilevers come in many shades and colors with low and medium heels and you get them at Mayer Brothers.

Another thing about Mayer Brothers shoes, they are fit to the light of an X-Ray machine. You can see the bones in your feet and avoid shoes that tend to cramp them out of shape.

According to Black

Two girls were leaving a beauty parlor the other day as I was entering. One said: "Black is so 'white' in his business dealings." The other girl giggled and I agreed. They were speaking of Mr. Black at Black's Modern Beauty Shop, 1122 N street. One had just been given a new permanent wave that was beautiful, soft, wide and natural for $10. Mr. Black had advised one girl to give her hair certain treatments before spending any money on a permanent wave. Hundreds of girls and women are now discussing hair quality, permanent waves, hair cuts and other beauty culture, "according to Black." L4023.

Out of town customers given special consideration.

Three-In-One

There are three experts in one shop at Mrs. Tripp's Beauty Shop, 117 South 14th street. Mrs. Tripp and Mrs. Earp are expert permanent wavers and Mr. Dyer gives the kind of hair cuts the ultra-smart like to wear. Other operators work under Mrs. Tripp's direction and the service is excellent. Call B3653 or write for an appointment.

In Chicago

CHICAGO—White coats have achieved a place of prominence for evening wear. These are of flannel, kasha and other woolen fabrics, and are favored also in the knitted types.

—O—

Spanish shawls are worn by women at smart dance places, although it is noted that these are chosen usually by younger set of the more exotic types, the conservative woman sponsoring the formal coat.

—O—

One young girl seen at a dance club recently wore a fine Spanish shawl in draped fashion with the garment fitted across the front, and the fringed ends worn over her shoulder. A short fringed band of embroidered silk around the head, turban-fashion added an interesting note to the costume.

—O—

Quilted taffeta and crepe de Chine coats, in white and cream color, mostly, were worn by very young girls dancing at the Edgewater Beach Hotel recently. These were draped around the figure in straightline fashion.

—O—

Cape styles apparently have surrendered their place to coats, as few of the former are seen. Occasionally, coats affect scarf necklines which are worn, cape fashion over the shoulders, but these are more often less suggestive of the cape than the coat mode.

Good Cheap Food

In purchasing food for the family, especially for children, what better, more nutritious food can one use than milk. What better bone builder? What better health giver? And surely there is nothing cheaper than milk at 10 cents a quart.

It has been said that milk would sour during thunder storms, and that humid weather renders it unfit for use. That is not true of Roberts milk. It does not sour during thunder storms or humid weather. Keep it cool and clean and that is all the precaution you need take. But remember I am speaking not of ordinary milk; it's Roberts milk.

Just Released

"Dream of Love," played by the Colonial orchestra is a real haunting jazz melody, taken from "Liebestraum (A Dream of Love) by Liszt. Have Schmoller and Mueller play it for you.

There Is a Reason

If your hair looks dead, will not take a permanent or hold a marcel, there is a reason. And it can be corrected. Mrs. Lewis at the Giffen Beaute Shoppe, 1340 M street, can tell you what causes hair to become lifeless and she can tell you how the circulation can be stimulated and the lifeless condition overcome.

Stop It!

Girls, I must tell you about this! There is nothing like it in existence. Haven't you been humiliated, mortified, etc, etc., because a snag in your hose had ruined it. This often happens when the furniture is imperfect and full of splinters. I have seen consternation written on the faces of hundreds of women because a brand new pair of expensive hose were snagged the first time they were worn. UTH is the answer to this human prayer. It prevents snagging and runs not only in silk hose but also in lingerie. The sheerest of chiffon hose can be subjected to almost unbelievable abuse. Uth triples the life of knitted silks and rayons. It prevents the wearing in the toe and heel and it does not injure or change the texture or shade of the most delicate materials. One treatment only is necessary. Uth is on sale at all department stores, drug stores and hosiery shops. There is enough in one package to treat fifty pairs of stockings.

Diamonds

Your eyes may shine like diamonds but eyes or no eyes every girl wants at least one to ten diamonds—and I do not blame her. The rings and pins at Charles Fleming's Jewelry store, would make one, more than ever want a diamond in the new patterns. And diamonds are good investments for they are always going up.

Parent-Teacher Notes

Summer Round-Up" of the children of Lancaster county was highly commended by the board of managers.

Other very helpful and interesting reports were: physical education by Dr. C. Ward Crampton, New York; school education, Miss Charl Williams, Washington, D. C.; illiteracy, Mrs. E. W. Hale, Whithaven, Tenn.; thrift, Mrs. Ella Carruthers Porter, Dallas, Texas; education extension, Walter J. Bittner, University of Indiana; rural life, Miss Florence E. Ward, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., and home education, Miss Ellen C. Leonard, Washington, D. C.

The next board meeting will be held in St. Louis, September 21. Excerpts from Dr. Thom's plan of work:

The program which has to do with mental hygiene for the Parent-Teacher association must necessarily be elementary, very general, and largely of an educational type, in order that it meets the neds of the child, the parent and the teacher, who dwell not only in our most populous centers where every opportunity will be available for lectures, clinics and study groups, but those who are as deeply concerned about the preservation of mental health, who are living in the most isolated hamlets. The slogan might well be "know the child," and in knowing the child, it is essential to know more of the fundamental principles of the normal workings of the child's mind and how these mechanisms are distorted by environment situations.

For the Parent-Teacher associations which are situated in the larger cities, where psychiatrists are available, I would strongly urge that their program for the year, beginning the fall of 1927, be given over largely to the very neglected mental side of the child's life, and that three meetings at least be directly concerned with the development of desirable habits and the preservation of mental health. Also that the mental health of the child be considered: 1. In relation to his physical health; 2. His intellectual equipment; 3. Environment influences.

In smaller communities, a great deal of interest and enthusiasm can be developed by the organization of small study groups who will discuss at each meeting some particular problem that is likely to arise between parents, children and teachers, such subjects as punishment, obedience, moral standards to expect of the pre-school child, jealousy, shyness, self consciousness, feelings of inferiority, having one member of the group present at each meeting have one of these subjects well worked up. A discussion with personal experience on how these problems should be handled should follow. Literature on these various subjects may be secured by writing the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, 370 Seventh avenue, New York City.

GOSPEL IS TEXT OF NEW PASTOR

Rev. Arthur Doege Says God's Word Purifies The Heart Of Man.

"The gospel purifies the heart of man, strikes at the root of all evil and changes iniquity into a fountain gushing forth a pure stream of noble works and deeds," declares Rev. Arthur J. Doege in his sermon on "The Gospel of the Crucified Christ" which will be delivered this morning at the English Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer, Twelfth and D streets.

Excerpts from his sermon are as follows:

"The gospel is as old as the world. It was preached in the Garden of Eden by God Himself when He told of the seed which should erush the serpent's head. This Gospel is still as effective as it was then. Through it the Holy Spirit creates faith in our hearts and sustains and strengthens our faith.

"Paul and Silas were loaded with fetters and writhing in pain at Phillipi. Yet their faith, buoyed up and preserved by the Gospel, was so strong that it manifested itself in the singing of hymns and Psalms of praise. This instance is by no means an isolated one in the history of the Christian church.

"The Gospel, by virtue of the faith which it has created in man's heart, saves from eternal perdition Jesus who has wrought salvation and leads to Heaven. It centers on for all through His death on the cross. 'For with His stripes, weare healed.'"

Simple Things Bring Happiest Moments

"The minute they handed out the little old diploma—I was 'eddicated, by gosh!".

"That was the happiest day of my life, believe me.

"You know—no more Latin, no more Greek—and all set to conquer the world."

Standing out in the dull series of successive twenty-four hours as prominently as a blackberry in a bowl of milk and as bright and shining as a new tin pan.

Happiest days or happiest moments are generally comparative.

A new Ford wouldn't cause one H. Ford to remember the day. Mr. Rockefeller wouldn't mark the calendar in red the day he made an extra dollar.

But even a painting, puffing, aboriginal number of the genus Ford and fifty cents extra in the old pay envelope would mean a life's rejoicing and would throw a gleam along the way forever for some of us.

It's better to have had a happiest moment and lost it than never to have been transported to the clouds for a minute. One happy day does help to gild nine drab ones that follow each other in dull array, like mourners at a funeral.

No matter if the cake falls and the baby cries, if the business fails and daughter elopes with the chauffeur, it is buoying to recall that for one moment you were extremely happy. When the mortgage is foreclosed on the old homestead and you can't meet the installments on the radio, then backward, turn backward, oh thoughts in your flight, and remember that all hours are not like tonight.

Those trusting souls who still subscribe to the tale that the marraige way is strewn with dethorned roses and roofed with roseate clouds, sideboarded with sweet words and papered with loving kisses, insist that the happiest moment of their lives was when he said "please do" or she said, "yes." Brave ones who after ten or a dozen years, yet say that that moonlight evening down by the old oak was the happiest moment of a long, dull life.

"I know I shall never be so happy again as when Peter asked me to marry him. Life has had some dark moments for us, but I haven't minded them when I thought of that supremely blissful moment.

"It seemed just the climax of living, and to me there shall never be such a happy time again. I guess the happiest moment for all of us married women is the night our husbands, sweethearts—what shall I say—asked the important question.

Ho hum!

A Fourth of July.

One girl less inclined to romanticise, calmly announced that one Fourth of July was the happiest day that she could remember. "The man" happened to be there, which influenced her decision. And they say it is becoming a feminized world — and the ladies announce their happiest moments center about the time "he" was there.

"We were all home together, and it was the last holiday we were together—father, mother, a brother, my fiance, and myself.

"It was just a simple home day, nothing startling, nothing dashing about it, nothing fashionable, nothing striking. Fried chicken and ice cream—you know the Fourth of July dinner—and then all of us out in the yard under the trees, taking a few pictures, talking, idling, now and again getting energetic enough to shoot off a bunch of crackers.

"I can't place the happiness of that day myself. Perhaps it was because we were never again together in quite the same way. My mother died before another year. Two of us parted in anger. The three left are drifted apart. It is a happiness tinged with tears, but I always think of that sunny, slow, careless Fourth as the happiest day of my life."

The men were a little reticent about expressing their happiest moments.

"Well, I don' know if I've got any happiest day. Gosh, I can't remember. They're all about a like, I guess—but lemme see. I don' know—

"Oh say, gosh, that night I got Cuba! Say that was some night, I'll tell you. Gee, everybody in the block'd been trying to get it, and I got it first. No night like that again."

Another man, more introspective, more inclined to publish his feelings didn't hesitate to say that when his small son curled his verv infant fingers about his thumb that that was his happiest moment.

"Say, you ought to have felt those little fingers, kind of like snowflakes they were so cool. Thats amoment you don't forget.

Mothersare quite ready to announce that Sally's first word or Johnny's first step were the supreme moments in life. But the happiest moments of the seven ages of man for most parents seemed to center about the children, whether it was the first tooth, the first report card, the first curl, or the first cry.

Happy all the time.

One young girl, too young to have had any but happy moments, had a bit of worry in her greatest moment of happiness—that she has yet known.

"I've been happy all the time, but I do remember the happiest time of my life.

"I'dbeen living with my grandmother, and her death left me all alone. "I didn't know where I was going to live, or if any of my relatives would take me, and I felt pretty blue and lonesome.

"I wanted to live with my uncle, but he had just been married, and I didn't think they would want me around. I was so worried and scared that I was almost sick. One day my uncle came over and told me I was to come to his house to live, and no matter what happy moments I may know some day, I don't believe I'll ever know any much greater than that."

One woman who seemed to have a little difficulty in placing the happiest moment of her lifee scorned the helpful suggestions gleaned from the others.

"Love! Pouf! Certainly not! How anyone can think of love as the happiest moment is beyond me. It is like saying you enjoy a prison sentence. At that, most prison terms come to an end."

"No - - - -. I believe my happiest moment was one Saturday night twenty years ago when I received my little pay envelope, with $3.00 in it, representing six days and Saturday night of work as a cash girl. Those were the days before these automatic tubes that do all the work.

"I've been fairly successful since that time, but there has never been a moment quite like that, when I stepped from the wicket, a little thing in a dull black dress, and counted those three precious dollar bills. They were untold wealth to me then, for I had never had even one dollar of my own before that.

"Hum, I hadn't thought of that for time of years, but I know it was the happiest moment of my life, if the briefest. Those three dollars all went home for food and necessities."

Not "Great" Events

A proposal, a baby's delicate little fingers, a pay envelope—simple things, and common, to cause happiest moments. Presentation to the queen, a Mediterranean trip in February, sudden fame— most of us would count some outstanding event as our shining hour, but it seems that most happiest moments are about some little thing, trivial in the great scheme of the world.

And one woman, who has had a fairly comfortable life, said her happiest day was the day her son came home from war.

"Two sons of friends of ours had been killed overseas, and it seemed miraculous to me that our son came home without a wound. I shall never forget the moment he got off the train, and I saw him straight and tall and strong as when he went away.'

And another man's happiest day was the day he bought his first car, a funy little model that might have been through several wars, "but it went, and it got me there and it got me back." The first job, again, the night the only girl came down the aisle in her bridal white, the time he became a partner in his law firm, and the day her family allowed her to come to LLincoln to work—other happiest moments in the lives of some of us in the capital city.

Peculiar, at Least.

At least one person within the borders of the second city of the state has a peculiar experience as his happiest moment.

"I had been out of the city and arrived home on a midnight train. None of the family met me, but it was a windy night, with spatters of cold rain, chilly as ghost hands on your face, and I didn't think much about it. I jumped into a taxi and started home.

"When I started up the walk, I saw the house was unlighted, and that my only welcome was a wet branch slapped across my face, as I passed a lilac bush in the yard. The house seemed uncannily still and dark, and you can imagine my consternation when I found the front door wide open, but no one standing there.

"I rushed in and called my wife, and not an answer. I called my oldest daughter, and the only sound was the swishing of wind and rain across the window pane. I tried to turn on the lights, and there seemed to be no current.

"I groped for the stairs, and tripped on a rug, but no sound from above. When I finally got up by the aid of flickering matches, which made my actions seem like those of a ghost, I found the beds prepared for the night, but unused. One of my daughter Helen's slippers was lying in the doorway, as though dropped in flight.

"I called and called again, but nothing but this mysterious eerie swishing. Thinking I heard a noise downstairs, I crept down step by step, and out to the kitchen. I stopped short, thinking I saw a man's shadow on the wall—and the back door was open wide. After the first start, I saw that the shadow was a reflection, but it sure was startling.

"Just at that moment, the family came creeping back, having heard my taxi. They had been upstairs when the lights had suddenly gone out, and in the perturbation, the swishing against the windows had seemed doubled.

"They had gone downstairs to look at the doors and windows, when my youngest daughter in the kitchen saw the man's reflection. She had screamed and gone out the back door, alarming her mother and other sister so that they had gone out the same way from the front door. Afraid to go back in they had gone down to my wife's mother a block down the street.

"Believe me, it was the happiest minute of my life when I heard 'em all come in alive and well, after I'd been imagining all sorts of horrors."

(2) Slide left foot out to side, toes pointed, arms out at shoulder level. (3) Slide heel of left foot to instep of right, swing arms into a circle, then extend left out in front and swing arms into circle, then raise left above head with right out to the right side. (4) Bring instep of left foot to the toe of right foot at right angles, swing arms into a circle in front, fingers touching, then raise both overhead. Repeat until you can go through positions smoothly.

"Comfort First" Is Slogan In Baby Ward At Lincoln General Hospital

Once upon a time there was a popular limerick which ran:
I wears my flannel nighties in the winter when it's's hot,
I wears by flannel nighties in the winter when it's not,
And sametimes in the springtime,
And sometimes in the fall,
I jumps right in between the sheets
With nothin' on at all'.'

—Neither Tennyson nor Keats.

While this quotation is not what one might call classical, still it rather hits these very young people who are making their bow to the world these hot days out at the Lenloln General hospital.

Some years ago our grandmothers would have been horrified at the idea of such a state of "uncoveredness" as these tiny things appear in the above picture. But Miss Emily Schrader, in charge of the nursery at the General hospital, is a strong believer in making babies comfortable and how could anyone or anything be comfortable on a day when the thermometer is registering near 100, rolled up in a flannel nightie and covered tight with a woolen blanket.

One of the latest things in equipment at the hospital, is the push cart, shown above, in which these young men and women are packed and taken up the hall at meal time.

Every baby stays in his or her own crib in the nursery throughout the day and night except at mealtime. The ordinary procedure used to be to let the floor nurses take the babies, one at a time, to their mammas for food, every three hours. This meant a lot of running back and forth for the nurses unless there happened to be a good number of "specials" or a lot of floor nurses.

The car saves all this time and work. It is a most interesting sight to be there at meal time. Out of the nursery comes the cart, pushed Miss Schrader or one of her helpers with twelve tiny pieces of mortality, properly tagged and labeled, packed like little sardines for a trip up the long hall. The cart stops at each door to let off the proper baby to its proper mamma.

About twenty-minutes later the cart starts back toward the nursery. There is usually less noise coming back than there was going up. Perhaps the difference in the size of their tummies coming back answers the reason why.

The picture in which the babies are wrapped in their blankets shows how they look on cold days or during the winter. The hospital furnishes all clothing and blankes until the baby is ready to go home.

While twins are not uncommon, still to have a pair born just succeeding each other is not a general "practice." July 4 brought two young sons weighing 5 pounds and 5 ounces and 5 pounds and 5½ ounces respectively, to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burton Tubman while the next day Mr. and Mrs. William Harry Carson announced the birth of a son weighing 5 pounds and 2 ounces and a daughter weighing 5 pounds and 14 ounces. They are shown above.

Once She Couldn't Express Her Views on Suffrage —Now, Ellen Dorcas Harn Sees Them in Constitution

A GLIMPSE OF HER HOME AT KENESAW, NEB., BUILT 40 YEARS AGO.

MISS HARN AND HER NIECE, MRS KATE THRALL OF LOS ANGELES.

LEFT - WONDERING IF THE DROUTH IS INJURING HER CORN.

MISS HARN MILKING HER JERSEY COW.

BY LULU MAE COE.

James K. Polk was the democratic nominee for the presidency.

Ellen Dorcas Harn, a little fifteen year old Maryland girl, heard the news on her uncle's plantation, where she had gone on an errand.

Arrived home again, her father and brother were discussing the coming election, wondering about the identity of the democratic candidate. The little Ellen knew, but she was a wise little girl—in 1844 fifteen years was still in little girlhood—and refused to tell that she knew. Experience and observation had taught her that her story would not be believed, for girls and women were considered the inferiors of men in those days, and she knew that she would be laughed at for pretending to know about Polk.

Some time later, an illiterate tenant of her father came to the plantation, shouting, "Hurrah for Polk," and bringing the news of his election.

From that moment, Ellen Harn began to meditate on inequality. Her father and brother believed the message of the uneducated farmer. They would have doubted the veracity of her message, because she was a girl.

With that incident, the cause of her life became the cause of suffrage, and its realization her fondest ambition.

Today, and active, intelligent woman of ninety-seven, seventy-six years later, Miss Harn sits in her own little suburban home in Kenesaw, and thinks quietly over the victory that was won six years ago, and smiles with pride as she says:

"The greatest satisfaction of my life is that at last I am rated as a human being."

This woman, who was born January 18, 1829, in the administration of John Quincy Adams, who ran to the neighbors to bring back live coals to start the fire in the days before matches, who is one of three living sisters over ninety years of age, who was told by her mother that "cars could never go over mountains," and "didn't want to come down" when she had her first airplane ride at ninety-one years of age, has never led a quiet, retired life. She was the vanguard of the new woman, the self-supporting woman, in the days when even school teaching was thought to be beneath the dignity of the daughters of cultured folk.

If the realization of equal suffrage was her greatest ambition, her years as a self-governing woman have been her greatest success in life, she feels. Defying tradition of gentlefolk, she began teaching in the days when the Maryland public schools were first opened to women, and made it possible for two sisters to be educated. She now has her "bit of property" near Kenesaw, accomplished her own higher education—and she never received $100 per month, in the forty years of her teaching.

Still Leads Active Life.

She has never rested, and she is not resting much today. If the years of her own restless energy have made her public work no longer necessary, they have left her sufficient strength to work about her little home on the outskirts of the village. The home she built in 1886, when she came to Kenesaw, and the pleasant yard and vegetable garden and flower plots, she reclaimed from the prairies, wild and untamed then.

A pleasant little white house, with its overhanging old trees, and furnished with the furniture she brought to it forty years ago. The trees she planted herself, slender little spindlings some of them, when she dug the holes for them with kitchen cooking spoon, hatchet, and chisel. Some of them were lowered into the ground to the words of a strong suffrage argument, and some to the words of temperance talks.

Twice a day, Miss Harn milks her Jersey cow, feeds her, waters her, and takes her out to pasture. The summer mornings and late afternoons she spends in her two gardens, one of vegetables and one of flowers.

Not merely the interested observer is she, but the actual gardener. Not so long ago, Miss Harn prepard the ground for her seeds, but a high school boy does that now to sav eenergies. Miss Harn does her own planting and weeding fied with her garden this year, beand watching—and she is not satiscause Kenesaw has been suffering from a drouth, and it isn't as fine as in other years. Corn, potatoes, beans, peas, lettuce, asparagus, beets, cabbage, all the staples of a good sized home garden grow in Miss Harn's garden. The flower plots are of oldfashioned flowers, zinnias, petunias, phlox, holly hocks, verbenas.

Never a Militant.

As a suffragette, Miss Harn was never a militant worker, but a steady, quiet, unremitting laborer in the cause of women. In the early days of her teaching, back in West Falls, Frederick county, Md., she could not openly avow her sentiments, because it probably would have meant loss of her position and she would have been told to attend to matters that concerned her. She tried to make people think and study and urged them to maintain an open mind and unbiased viewpoint, never doubting that some day her dream would be realized.

She was instrumental in organizing the suffrage organization at Kenesaw, and was president from the time of its founding, in 1902, until it ceased to meet, after the passage of the suffrage amendment. Miss Harn didn't care for platform speaking, but she spent her energies in individual discussion, taking petitions about, presenting the cause, and urging its justice.

Miss Harn acknowledges that she wasn't always popular, and that she often met closed doors which no knocking would open. Women refused to listen, because their husbands didn't like the idea or they themselves thought it foolish, men laughed at her arguments, and many scoffed! But she had some satisfaction in seeing one of the first women's ballots in the village cast by a woman whom she had apparently been unable to convince.

At one time in her energetic working for the cause, Miss Harn was threatened with jail on the charge of obstructing public business. She had been about with a petition, and in order to make her case, the jail sentence was threatened without trial. Her only street speech was made in Minden, in the last suffrage campaign, when she insisted on woman's right to vote, and said that women had been regarded as "vulgar fractions," but she wanted the "fractions carried out correctly."

Always a Prohibitionist.

Miss Harn has always been an ardent prohibitionist, and her first work for this cause was through the W. C. T. U. Contests were her favorite method of propaganda, and as chairman of the franchise committee of the W. C. T. U. she held twenty-six contests, in which the good old subjects of suffrage and liquor were commingled. The contestants were all rehearsed by Miss Harn, and she feels that that work contributed a great deal for the larger causes in the country.

In her mind, suffrage and prohibition have always been one, and it was that fact that led her to leave the W. C. T. U. for more active work of suffrage. Miss Harn felt that Frances E. Willard and her followers moved too slowly toward the goal, and that if women gained suffrage, prohibition would follow.

Strangely enough, even though Miss Harn had always been an ardent republican, she had always been in favor of the prohibition ticket because of her beliefs. However, she cast her first vote for a democrat, when shevoted for William Jennings Bryan in 1920 as delegate.

Miss Harn first came west in 1881 for a visit, and taught in Kenesaw for a term, before being called back to Barton, Md., where she had taught. A. D. Williams, her brother-in-law, was living in Kenesaw at the time, he having previously been president of the Peru Normal, and she came to be with the family. In 1886, she returned to stay, and for five years was principal of the Kenesaw school. Miss Mary Williams, her niece, who was also prominent in suffrage, makes her home with Miss Harn now. Miss Harn is an aunt by marriage of I. D. Evans, recording clerk in the governor's office.

As principal of the school, she promoted several contests. One woman later told her that she owed her interest in suffrage to Miss Harn's contests, and the facts and figures she gained from the "piece."

Attended 1890 Convention.

Miss Harn attended her first national convention in Washington in 1890, when Susan B. Anthony was elected president and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw vice president. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucy Stone Blackwell were other outstanding figures at the convention. Miss Harn was a member of the committee on resolutions from Nebraska, appointed by Mrs. Clara B. Colby. She made a talk at the convention, explaining how certain matters on suffrage were handled in Nebraska.

Before that time, the papers had maligned Miss Anthony most unjustly, saying she was a characterless woman, intent on getting money for herself for foolishness. As soon as Miss Harn saw the great suffrage pioneer, she felt confident that all stories were untrue.

"I saw her walk down the aisle in her old black shawl. She was not a very large woman, with a sensible and agreeable face," Miss Harn declares. When I met her, I found her to have a most sensible manner, and a kind way."

That was a tumulous convention, with many factions. One woman, however, quieted it, with the remark that that organization had too much to do, too great things to accomplish, to indulge in factional disagreements. From that moment, Miss Harn says, the sessions were quiet and peaceful.

Miss Harn's last convention was the last convention of the national suffrage association, for the cause had been won. Because of her long prominence in the activities in the state, suffrage organizations contributed a fund for her railroad fare to Chicago. She was the oldest suffragist—she who had so long been a suffragette—at the convention, and was honored at the banquet. Miss Harn sat at the right hand of the chairman, Mrs. McCormick, with Mrs. Carrie Chap-

The Musical World

The piano pupils of Mrs. M. T. Meyer, 221 West Nineteenth street, University Place, gave their annual summer recital at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sams, 134 West Twenty-third street, University Place, Friday evening, July 16. A program of piano solos and duets, songs and recitations was given.

Within thirty days, Frieda Hempel, opera singer will receive a decree of divorce from her husband, William D. Kahn, a patent broker in New York. When Mr. Kahn was summoned by the court to appear in reference to the customary attempts at reconciliation, he failed to appear, and took no part in the proceedings.

Catherine Fisk, music teacher former opera star, died recently in a sanitarium in Pasadena, Cal., where she has been making her home the last ten years. Mme. Fisk was with the Metropolitan Opera company twenty-five years ago, and she later toured the country with Lillian Nordica and Nathan Franko, violinist and conductor. Since her residence in Pasadena she has taught scores of pupils from whom she refused compensation.

The Italian government has just made Tito Schipa a grand officer in the Order of the Corona d'Italia, in recognition of his generosity towards his native city, Leece, which prompted him to organize there and take part in a season of opera which enlisted the services of distinguished artists rarely if ever seen in a city of that size. The order was presented to him on the stage at Leece between the acts of a performance of Lucia in which he sang.

Mediocre talent will no longer be permitted the flattering disguise of "prima donna or leading tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company." That organization has opened a campaign against all "bootleggers of opera" who advertise a false connection with the Chicago Civic Opera Company.

The move was designed "to protect a fifteen-year investment of $20,000,000 in the reputation" of the opera company, and the officials say they cannot afford to have the music-loving public defrauded through quack managers.

A recital was given in Queen Mary's private apartments at Windsor Castle by Maria Jeritza, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, when she and her husband Baron Popper, were guests of the King and Queen of England over the week-end on June 19. The audience included, besides the King and Queen, Princess Mary, Viscount Lascelles, Prince Henry and others. Mme. Jeritza was given jewelry representing the initials of the King and Queen, with the crown of England in diamonds.

Occasionally there rises from the ruck of present-day composers one who possesses a semblance of originality. And who exercises restraint. Manuel de Falla is one of those. His master Pedro puppet opera proved the finest of all the compositions performed at Zurich. New York had already heard it, so those New Yorkers in the beautiful Swiss city who had a second opportunity to sit through it were gratified.

There were other interesting works heard during the festival, all of which will be set forth in The Musical Digest in due course. The foregoing were some of the highlights during the first two days.

Rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, Clare Dux says that she has no intention of retiring. She will fulfill all of her concert engagements and plans to add to her already long list of programs. However, she does not intend to do any more opera work.

RADIO DIGEST

Shock Absorbers.

Air cushions as shock absorbers for receiving sets are among the most recent developments of radio engineers. it is claimed that the use of these cushions will eliminate vibrations, aid materially in undisturbed tuning, improve reception and reduce to a minimum microphonic noises. They insulate the set and prevent fine furniture from becoming scratched. They are quickly and easily installed and no fastening is required.

To Reduce Static in Summer.

Much of the summer static can be greatly reduced by using a short low aerial. It should be about 50 feet in length and suspended about 20 feet above earth. It must be remembered, however that a short antenna is not capable of picking up distant stations as readily as a longer one.

Farmers Keep Accounts To Discover Actual Production Cost For Bushel of Corn

What does it cost to raise a bushel of corn? Few farmers would even attempt to estimate the cost of production and those who think they know probably forget to include such things as figuring depreciation on machinery or even to value their own labor.

According to a report recently published by the farm management department of the agricultural college it cost twenty representative farmers in Saunders county an average of 42 cents to grow a bushel of corn last year, giving them a net profit of 17 cents as a result of their endeavors. In Fillmore county fourteen farmers received an average profit of four cents a bushel as a result of producing corn for 61 cents a bushel.

This report was compiled by Mason Yerkes and A. W. Medlar and the figures are supposed to be representative for this part of the state. Reports on the cost of production will be made this year for the same counties and also for Cass, Douglas, Dodge and the western counties of Perkins, Cheyenne and Kimball.

In Saunders county the total cost of production per acre for 1925 was $12.26 thus leaving the owner a net profit of $4.03 to the acre. Six and eight-tenths hours of man labor was the average time spent upon one acre up until husking time. Thirty cents was taken as the man labor cost and the average profit figured out to be fifty-nine cents per hour. The tenants yield per acre was taken as three-fifths of the number of bushels produced and in 1925 the average for these farms was twenty-four bushels. The total number of acres each farmer had under cultivation was sixty-seven and under these conditions the farmer would receive the total net profit of $270.61.

Figures for Fillmore county are quite similar. A higher cost of production coupled with the lower yield of eighteen bushels per acre (after deducting the landlord's share) was only partially offset by the fact that the total number of acres farmed was seventy, three more than in Saunders. The resultant total profit to the average farmer above the pay for his labor was $56.

When one farm makes a net profit of $4.20 an acre while another in the same county loses $6.85 as was true in Fillmore, the condition may be partly explained because the natural fertility of the soil varies but it also indicates that management is as important a factor towards success in agriculture as it is in other businesses.

The report reaches the conclusion that a system of farm accounting is needed if the farmer is to secure the largest yield possible for the lowest expense. A somewhat similar study made in regard to the cost of producing wheat in Case county in 1924 would give the same conclusion because the cost was found to vary from as low as sixty-five cents per bushel to one dollar and twelve cents per bushel.

Records are being kept at a number of places over the state this year which will be compiled to show the cost of production of other crops and also for raising cattle and hogs.

KEARNEY NORMAL

Earl Dyer of Elwood, and Miss Ebba Olsson have been selected as teachers at Newark, which is affiliated with the rural department at Kearney college. Mr. Dyer was in charge of the school at High Prairie in Polk county last year. He is at present a student at Kearney. Miss Olsson has served as demonstration teacher in the Newark school during the summer.

The projection of the feature play, "The Iron Horse," in the college auditorium Friday night, July 9, was sponsored by the Pi Kappa Delta. An educational film, "The Making of Steel" preceded the feature.

Prof. L. B. Sipple, formerly director of rural education, now dean of the teachers college at Aberdeen, S. D., is planning a visit to Kearney during the second half of the summer term.

Miss Agnes Knutzen, supervisor of the kindergarten department, has been granted leave of absence during the second term of the summer quarter. Accompanied by her sister, Miss Julia Knutzen, who has charge of Latin in the Englewood high school, Miss Knutzen will visit Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Helena, Mont., before her return in time to begin work when school opens in September. Miss Knutzen will visit the University at Berkeley, California, and the southern branch at Los Angeles, giving special attention to the kindergarten work as presented by those institutions.

Whether students may be graduated from Kearney college and receive diplomas without taking the trouble to attend the formal graduation exercises is to be determined by a committee of faculty members, according to an announcement made by the administration office recently. Prof. C. N. Anderson of the history department, Prof. Romayne Webster of the home economics department and Miss Minnie Larson of the are department have been appointed by Pres. George E. Martin to pass on the validity of the students' excuses to be absent from their graduation exercises.

Among the marriages recently announced as the following: Miss Amelia Downing, of Beaver City, and Tom Hamer, of Kearney, were married Saturday, July 18, in Santa Monica, Cal. Miss Downing received her two-year diploma in 1923 and taught the following two years at Overton, Neb. Mr. Hamer was a student in Kearney college during 1922 and 1925, and is now attending the college of medicine, University of California. Miss Claire Robertson of Mason City and Severin Arp of Broken Bow were married Sunday evening, June 13. Miss Robertson, a graduate of Kearney college, has been teaching in the high school at Mason City. Mr. and Mrs. Arp will make their home in Broken Bow, where Mr. Arp is cashier of the Nebraska State bank of Broken Bow.

Students and townspeople were entertained Saturday evening by a band concert under the direction of Prof. R. C. Rogers, director of public school music. This organization, starting a year ago with only four pieces, has expanded until it has twenty at this time, all of whom are regarded as competent musicians. The same organization appeared in concert at the Buda school, which is affiliated with Kearney college, and where the rural department maintains a summer demonstration school. At this gathering the patrons of the school were entertained by demonstrations of the work of the school, as well as by the musical numbers of college band.

CHADRON NORMAL.

Miss Amanda Osnes left Chadron Saturday on a vacation trip to Yellowstone park. She will be met at Cody by Miss Maybelle Rardin, Mrs. Rardin and Miss June Anderson, who drove to that point earlier in the week.

A portion of the Wednesday program at the regular assembly period was furnished by the Scrap Iron quartet. Members of this redoubtable organization are Mr. Yarndley, head of the department of music, Dr. Marberry of the department of education, Superintendent Liebendorfer of Sidney, and Mr. McKinney of the public school music department.

A well attended voice recital took place in assembly hall Monday evening. Both Miss Ruth Rigdon and her accompanist, Miss Reva Denslow, deservedly received the plaudits of the audience. An out-of-town guest for this occasion was Mrs. Rigdon of Omaha, mother of the singer.

Roy Work, brother of Dean Work, drove to his home in Denver last week, returning with his family a few days ago. They will live in Chadron in future.

Ira A. McKinney visited Sylvan Lake, near Custer, S. D., last week.

CLIPPING THE TIGER'S CLAWS.

The committee which has been considering the crime problem in America reports that 90 percent of the hardened criminals in this country escape arrest. Of the 10 percent apprehended, three-fourths of them escape conviction.

That is a startling indictment of our police methods and our system of justice. As against the automobile and all of the other gifts of modern science, which the criminal has adapted to aid his fight against law, the police officers of America have been waging a valiant but losing fight. The odds are heavy and the task made increasingly difficult through the failure of the courts to convict after the police have performed their duty.

For the first time the American Bar association, meeting in Denver, has gotten down to bedrock.

It has confessed that the legal profession is in no small measure to blame for the difficulties of law enforcement. It has taken cognizance of the fact that a small proportion of the practicing lawyers live by devising loopholes in the law. For these unworthy members of the legal profession, the American Bar association has only contempt. Sentiment creeping out in the discussions gave basis for the hope and the belief that the lawyers will clean up this situation. An organization similar to the one formed some months ago in Chicago, where lawlessness has been particularly alarming, is needed. There the reputable and outstanding members of the Chicago Bar pledged themselves to refuse to accept the defense of any known criminal or to undertake to secure liberty for any man who admitted his guilt. An extension of this same policy throughout the entire country would strike more terror in the criminals' hearts than any move which could be made. So long as the lawbreaker knows that he can hire a wily and unscrupulous lawyer to defeat the ends of justice, he will continue to ply his trade. But when he finds himself confronted with the impossibility of securing trained and competent legal assistance in the event of apprehension, he will think twice before he commits a crime.

Equally significant is the report of the National Crime Commission, which was submitted to the organization. It was drafted by a committee of which Herbert S. Hadley, former governor of Missouri and a distinguished lawyer of national prominence, was chairman.

Briefly the committee found that law tended to much to protect the criminal instead of society. It proposes a series of reforms which will do much towards eliminating the technicalities which so many times interfere with substantial justice. Its recommendations are:

2—Immediate arraignment in court of arrested persons.

3—Prosecution upon information, or affidavit, as well as by indictment.

5—Liberalizing the laws of evidence, with a view towards removing the restrictions placed upon the courts.

This follows the general plan of British criminal procedure.

It would tend to greatly accelerate justice, which after all is the greatest criticism which can be brought against the American system of law administration. Long-drawn out trials weaken any of the salutary influences of legal restriction. Law can't be flaunted and kicked about and impeded, and be made to appear impotent and ineffective if it is to command any respect. Man is still too close to the age of force to be ruled and controlled and restrained by reason. He requires a heavy hand upon his shoulder and he must know that it will strike him if he makes a false move.

Two of the recommendations are particularly commendable. The five-sixths vote of the jury to secure convictions is sensible and sane. To permit one man to hang a jury results in constant miscarriages of justice. With equal force it can be said that the rules of evidence need to be liberalized. They should be made to conform to commonsense, which is more than can be said in all cases now.

The claws of the tiger must be clipped if American institutions are to prevail.

JOHN DREW RETIRES.

John Drew—a name seldom heard nowadays, but one which brings back a host of vivid stage figures—has announced his retirement. Seventy-three years old, Mr. Drew has been on the American stage for fifty-three years. He was the son of John and Louisa Lane Drew, and is the uncle of Ethel, John, and Lionel Barrymore. The list of stars with whom he has played includes the greatest men and women who ever appeared before the footlights.

His career began under his mother's management in Philadelphia in 1873. After acting with Edwin Booth, Fanny Davenport, Maude Adams, and other well-known stars, he became leading man in Daly's historic company. Even the ultra-conservative and unemotional encylopedia becomes slightly enthusiastic at mention of his name, for it states: "He figures with marked success in jeune premier roles in the revival of the classic comedies, notably as Petruchio in 'The Taming of the Shrew,' and as Charles Surface in 'The School for Scandal,' and also in Mr. Daly's new productions. After 1892 he appeared as a star, among his plays being 'The Masked Ball,' 'The Butterflies,' 'A Marriage of Convenience,' 'One Summer's Day,' 'The Liars,' and 'Richard Carvel.' He finds his best roles in bantering, semi-ironical society characters."

With such brief mention, the dean of the American stage goes down to future generations. He worked in the day of great actors—when words were as important as "close ups" and when dramas were portrayed by human beings who walked and breathed in person before the audience rather than by flat pictures on a lifeless screen. The older generation will smile with delightful memories at the sound of his name, but younger people will never know of him.

How true are Max Beerbohm's observations upon acting! "The actor's art," he once wrote, "is evanescent, and he must needs, therefore, be rather hectic in his desire for fame. Good books and good pictures are monuments, which, once made, are always there and may take fresh garlands; but the actor's finest impersonation, repeated night after night, is a thing of no substance, exists not but from his lips, perishes with him."

And so with John Drew, the applause which he once received in such abundance, will cease with his retirement. And the few of his applauders who remain, will turn to new stars—but the successors are men who for the most part pose before cameras, and not men who stop in person from behind the curtain to receive ovations. The new artists have the satisfaction denied to Drew and his generation of knowing that their work can survive them, but they may well envy their predecessors the intensity of the fame and lustre of the fame which they once won—even though it be quickly lost.

AN UNKIND CUT.

Ruth Etting's decision to relinquish her rights to a $125,000 estate because of the conditions imposed was the unkindest cut of all. She was unwilling to abide by the decree of her grandmother that to enjoy this fortune she must live in David City, Neb., and operate the 600-acre farm which was willed her.

No farm life for Miss Etting, a singer, who in private life is Mrs. Maurice Snyder, the wife of a Chicago attorney. She would prefer to forfeit the money.

"It's worth that to live in Chicago and become famous instead of burying myself on a Nebraska farm," she is quoted as saying.

Possibly that's right. But there are hundreds of thousands of people in Chicago, living miserably, desperately, and sadly, who would jump at the chance to live on a 600-acre farm, located in one of the most productive and beautiful sections of Nebraska, and within stone's throw of the capital and the metropolis. Miss Etting can thank her lucky stars fate has been so kind to her. One can hardly imagine she has any worries over the grocery bill, or when the rent comes due, or how the next pair of shoes or the next dress is to be bought. She undoubtedly has her comfortable home, with servants to look after her wants. Life has its rosy tints under these conditions. But, God help the poor devils who bury themselves in the great city with a slim pocketbook. Where can there be found such isolation? Where is there such stark, grim poverty? Contrasted with the friendly countryside it is the most desolate wilderness in the world.

A great artist should have a heart. He or she should know something about life, and should not be coldly contemptuous of its sorrows and its suffering.

And yet who would say that Miss Etting has made a mistake? The miracle of growing crops holds no fascination for her. The glory of the countryside, with its alternating stretches of golden yellow wheat, and the dark green of its fields of corn stirs no emotion in her breast. Her atmosphere is the canyons of stone and brick, the noisy thoroughfares of the city, with its rushing crowds of people from every strata of life. Somehow we feel just a bit sorry for Miss Etting for in spite of all her good fortune, she has missed something that leaves its touch on men and women, and enriches their lives far beyond gold or silver or fleeting fame.

THE TRAGEDY OF INCHES.

Little things that come to light every now and then would seem to indicate that as a people we are gradually losing our individuality and are being slowly but surely squeezed into standard sizes.

Recall the hardy, brawny pioneers of a little more than a century ago. They stood "six foot six in their stocking feet" and were proud of it. No petting and pampering for them. They knew what they wanted and took it by virtue of their size.

Contrast with them the six-footers of today who are members of the Tall Men's association of America. They are hopelessly, but most politely, requesting the hotel managements to provide special floors for them in which the fixtures and furnishings would be made a size or two larger to fit their bulky forms. Not only that, but they are also beseeching the Pullman company to add a couple of inches to the berths in its cars. Probably because of the warm weather, or perhaps through some oversight they forgot to include the sheets in their request.

No discredit to these suffering tall men, however. Only the deepest sympathy. They have an unequal battle to fight if they are to hang on their rights. There are only two million six-footers in the United States today, as against one hundred and ten million standard-sized persons. What chance have they? Their grandfathers could have scowled down upon some little shrimp and proceeded to enforce the law of the survival of the fittest. Not so today. If some oversized giant should attempt to assert his rights to comfort by kicking out the foot end of a Pullman berth, he would land in a cell and would be called upon to face the penalty of a law provided by the one hundred and ten million little fellows.

It's tough. There must be something wrong with nature. It would seem that the survival is coming to be of those who fit rather than of those who are the fittest.

SILENT CAL AND SILENT PIKE.

Calvin Coolidge's preference for pike fishing has been strongly expressed since the president took up his abode in the woods and lakes of northern New York. The first fish which he hooked was a pike. Since then the catches which have aroused his pride most have been pike. He has taken a few trout and a bass or two but the royal specimen of the finny tribe which has coaxed the broadest smile from Silent Cal has been a pike.

There's a reason.

The pike admires silence. It haunts the deep, still pool, where man and beasts are least liable to disturb. Of all of the varieties of fish in the lakes, none is more sensitive to noise than a pike. Now Mr. Coolidge is a silent man. He can sit for hours without uttering a word. In Washington they say his thoughtful moods are uninterrupted by speech for days at a time. That is why it was said he selected the New York lake for his summer vacation. It was reported he thought it offered unexcelled opportunities to enjoy unbroken silence. But since Cal has taken up the rod and has shown his skill as a pike fisherman, we know he does not talk. He's not meditating or even thinking. He's trying to outsilence the silent pike.

Mr. Coolidge must find pike fishing a merciful relief after politics. Most fish stay hooked after they have been caught. That's more than you can say for most politicians. They're with you one day and the other fellow the next.

THE FOREIGN MARKET.

Sane advice was that which former Senator Lewis of Illinois handed to a Denver audience this week.

Talk of farm relief legislation is foolish and futile in view of the rapidly disappearing market for American-made goods, he said. Europe must be put in order so that it will be in a position to buy our products without any large amount of noise, America's best customer has been gradually speeding up home production until she is just able to satisfy her own needs. Added to the loss resulting from this is the fact that financially most European countries are not able to buy much outside.

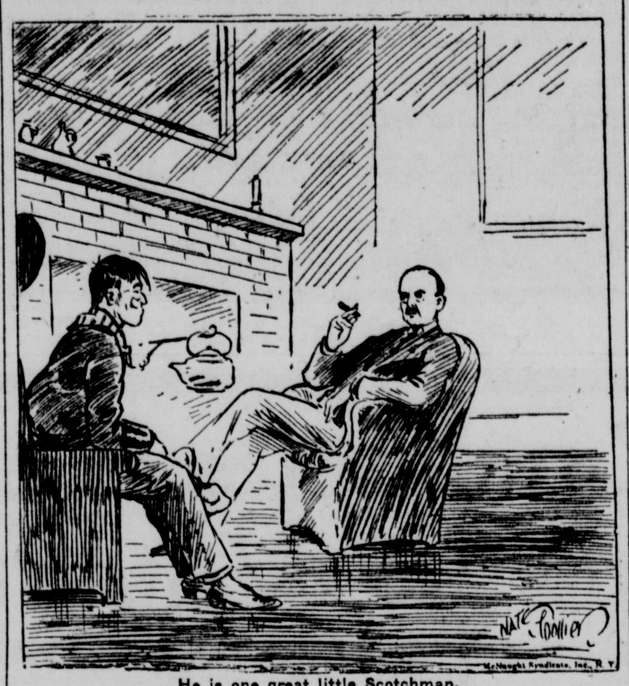

Asia is following in Europe's footsteps. The Asiatic people are deeply resentful of the exclusion policies incorporated in the American immigration law and are buying less and less of American-made goods where it is possible to substitute European products for them.

The first step is rehabilitation of Europe. A generous and helpful policy towards our neighbors across the seas will do more to restore the foreign market than any action which can be taken. But the tariff, farm relief, or any of the other proposals which have been before congress are not America's most pressing problem. It is the restoration of the foreign markets.

Life is like driving an automobile. When you first come into the family they brag about you. When you grow old they would like to get rid of you.

An Interview With Sir James Barrie

BY WILL ROGERS.

He is one great little Scotchman.

Well, all I know is just what I read in the papers, but I really have the best news for you just because I didn't get to read the papers today. While here I was fortunate enough to meet Mrs. Astor, our very distinguished countrywoman, and she was good enough to have me to dinner one night, and seated on my left was Sir James Barrie, the little Scotch author that has written such wonderful things. I had never read any of them, but I knew enough to know that he was a great man. After the dinner he asked me to come by his apartment on my way back to my hotel. There was no one else along, just he and I. Well, that was the greatest fortune that befell me so far on the whole trip.

He lives up to what I think was the top floor of an apartment overlooking the Thames embankment. First I will tell you about the apartment, or rather the main living room of the apartment which we were in. It was not very large but had big windows opening out onto a stone baulustrade, or porch, and you got a wonderful view all up and down the river. This was right by the Savoy and the Cecil. The street, or really what we would call an alley, is Avenue Court or terrace. That's the one you enter on. He took great pride telling me of the great historical interest of the place ,that is used to belong to Queen Lizzie or Maggie, or somebody. I can't keep those Queens straight. But anyway, Queen Victoria was as far back as I could remember, and as it was not her that owned the place originally, why I lost all interest.

Then he pointed out to me all the various houses, right there fronting like his, out on the river, where all the great men mostly of literary prominence had lived at one time or another. He showed me where Dr. Johnson used to live, where he and Boswell come out and used to stand and talk. In fact, I think it's where he said Johnson first met Boswell. He showed me where a lot o fthe plot and the characters of Dickens was played, as Dickens used to frequent this neighborhood.

Then he said "Peter the Great" lived right down there at one time when he was here and worked as a "Navvy." Oh, he named one after the other, and I just thought what a treat for some Literary person that had really heard of any of these. He didn't mention Shakespeare, and as that was the only English writer I had ever heard of, why naturally I was lost.

He told me how during the war that they used to watch the air raids, as the German aviators when they tried to bombard London would naturally follow the river Thames, and then they always knew where they were. Bernard Shaw lives right across the alley or street, as it is generously called, from him.

He has promised me that when I come back to London a few weeks later that he will have me meet Shaw. I do want to meet and hear him, because he has the dope on all of them, and it's generally right. But Shaw was out of town. Sir James told me that Shaw had not been well and spent a great deal of his time in the country. Shaw is the guy that tells all of them where to head in at. Sir James paid him a beautiful compliment. He said, "He is a wonderful man in many ways. If I needed help tomorrow, not only for myself, but anyone else, I would turn to Bernard Shaw. He is a very fine man, and I am very, very fond of him."

Then he told me one night when there was a raid, and he and Shaw and H. G. Wells and some other very well known writer sit right there and watched it. Now all during this, for once in my life, I happened to know enough to keep my mouth shut. I would just sit and let him talk all he would. I would just slip in a question now and again to get him sorter started on something I practically wanted to hear about. Of course I knew Aemrica wanted to know about his wonderful plays, and Maud Adams, and Frohman, and he liked to talk of it because evidently it was a very wonderful association.

His first show was The Little Minister. With Charles Frohman, Barrie went to America, and they were not settled on anyone to play the part. Frohman gave him a list of names of actresses to look over, and he was doing that in various shows which they were playing, and he chanced to go into a theatre where where there was a Frohman play, but it was not any that he had been advised to see. But in this was Miss Adams, playing. So he went back to Mr. Frohman and told him he had found the one to play the Little Minister. Frohman told him, "Why her mother has worked for me for years, and I have always had a great interest in them, and she has helped me in lots of my work here, and incidentally she is the one that made out the list of actresses that you were to go and see."

There is fairy story enough for a Peter Pan right there. He never saw her play on the stage, he said, but once after that in his life. He said that she was the only woman, or even man, for that matter, that he ever saw in his life with absolutely no vanity whatever. She didn't know what it was. He said she used to come over to London every once in a while and come to see him. "What a peculiar thing," he remarked, "that she had such wonderful artistry and talent, and then she goes in for some entirely different kind of work. I can't understand it." She is experimenting and working on some new progress of electric lighting for pictures.

He said, "We shall never see another just like her." Frohman, he thought, was the finest character of a man he ever saw. He told me the story of an actor that was very bad in the part, but that Frohman found out was very much in need of the money, as he was the support of his mother and sisters. Frohman said, when asked by another if his staff to get rid of the fellow, "Oh, no, we must keep him! But when he comes on we can converse and not look."

He related dozens of things that Frohman had done for people. He roduced a young playwright's play and it was a dire failure. It was his first attempt. Yet Frohman cabled him to England, "Play fair, but am sending so much money as option on your next two."

Now he had just done that to try and salve over the failure of this one and make the fellow think, "Well, I must have showed something in that one anyway, or he wouldn't want the next two."

Sir James couldn't understand the great prevalence of unclean shows he had heard of being in New York this season. He didn't think so much of pictures, although he said they handled Peter Pan very well, he thought. But that he didn't think pictures would ever achieve very much until they quit trying to make them to please everybody. That the tastes of one audience was absolutely opposite from the other, and that they would to be like the spoken show is today, produced for a certain class. He said that no stage show ever produced would go everywhere.

He is the greatest personality, so quiet and soft spoken you are afraid you will scare him away if you speak. And I expect I would if I had said much. He has the funniest looking fireplace, with a little fire burning in it. But you kinda get back in it, like you was crawling in under a shed, and the fire s not back in a real place, it is just built against the wall. He has a little cook stove and a tea pot on it. I guess there is where he makes him his own tea when he is working. He said he wrote in the mornings, as he found that was better. He wants to come over home again some time, as he hasn't been over in years.

He is one great little Scotchman, and I will always be grateful all my life to Mrs. Astor for having made it possible to meet him. He seemed just as pleased with me when I admitted to him that I had not read his books as he would be with a lot of others that would say, "Oh, Mr. Barrie, I have read everything you ever wrote!" and he would know they couldn't even name any of them. So I found it better to not lie. They will find you out anyway. But little Bill, my kid told me all about the books that night when I got home. So I have got somebody reading for me anyway.

Franklin Roosevelt Wins A Long Fight For Health

(New York World.)

Friends and relatives of Franklin D. Roosevelt, pleased beyond measure at the great fight he has made to regain his health, do not look with favor on the suggestion in some quarters that the former assistant secretary of the navy become a candidate for any office this fall.

Two years more and he will be fit and able to enter a campaign, but not now, say the friends of the man who has made one of the gamest of battles to regain his health.

It is five years this summer since word was received in New York that Mr. Roosevelt, who, the year before had been the candidate of the Democratic party for vice president, had been stricken by infantile paralysis.

For almost six weeks the patient lay between life and death at his summer home on the Canadian island of Campobello, N. B., two miles across the harbor from Eastport, Me.

Having run its course, the dread disease with which he had been stricken left him paralyzed from the waist down. In the few weeks the big strong, athletic man in his prime had been cut down with little hope held out that he ever would walk again.

Back of the quiet and the reserve of Roosevelt there wa sthe fighting spirit, the determination to do, to live; and get well. So that when he was carried to a motor boat and ferried across to where his private car was waiting for him he smoked a cigaret and declared he felt fine. No one has ever heard him say anything else since.

From the private car he was taken to Roosevelt hospital and the work of trying to get him to respond to treatment continued. The legs that had been sturdy and strong continued to waste away until they were shrunken beyond belief.

Two years ago, three years after he had been stricken at his camp, Franklyin D. Roosevelt became the head and front of the movement to nominate Governor Smith for president.

People shook their heads and declared he would be only a figurehead that he could not possibly have the vitality to go through a campaign for the nomination, practically in view of the character of the fight that was being made upon Governor Smith. But he had. Early and late Franklin D. Roosevelt was at the Smith headquarters seeing Democrats from other states, deciding questions of policy and looking for strategic advantage to be gained at any time.

During all this time Franklin D. Roosevelt found time to take the exercises doctors had said might help him. The little improvement that he made might have discouraged another because it was so slight, but Roosevelt plugged on.

The most dramatic happening of the convention was this figure of a man, forceful, pleasant, smiling though he must have been suffering, making his wa from the New York delegation to the platform and there standing and placing Governor Smith in nomination.

When he finished he was in, but smiling, and his rhetorical effort had been voted a great speech and he had made thousands of friends.

Mr. Roosevelt was then still trying to manage those legs, but it was noticed he used them to better advantage.

Since the convention Mr. Roosevelt has come along gradually. The legs that had dwindled have taken on flesh, due to circulation that has been established by massage and his own efforts. Today he has laid aside one of his crutches and is able with the aid of the other to get around.

WHY NOT AN AMPHITHEATER FOR ANTELOPE PARK?

"Rain, rain, Go away—
"Come again some other day.."

The wind, the dirt and the passshower—

Cleared Antelope Park in less than an hour.

Lincoln, Neb., July 17.

To the Editor of The Lincoln Star—Wednesday evening proved the fact that an amphitheater ought to be erected at Antelope park of sufficient diminisions to accomodate the picnickers that assemble at this popular place every night to enjoy a picnic dinner in the open, play games and enjoy themselves outside of their busy business hours.

Wednesday evening was an exceptional one for this comment. The day was fine and the way was pleasant and many picnickers assembled at the park. Among them were members of the Past Officers Association of the I. O. O. F. to the number of fifty, and "Just as the Sun Went Down" there arose in the northwest a great big black cloud which circling to the southwest, backed up onto the picnickers with all the fury and gusto of a cyclone. The wind preceding the rain and the terrible dust arising, proved too much for those present and a great evacuation was soon under way. The tables were quickly cleared and some had to grab the table cloths and other things in order that they might not "Be Lost to Sight, to Memory Dear." Some hid behind the portals of the south gateway, while others beat a hasty

Old "Yank" Robinson First Perceived Ringlings Would Make Great Success

"It again was glitteringly and triumphantly refulgent."

BY PRESTON WRIGHT.

This is the season when circuses, big and little, daily enfold sweltering thousands beneath their sloping roofs of canvas. One big show, like Ringlings, will attract 25,000 or more visitors in a single day. But the hordes who pay good money to witness the wonders of the circus, and to whom the name of the famous brothers has become almost as much of a household word as that of the late P. T. Barnum was to the public of his day, has slight curiosity regarding the big show except as to its power to amuse and thrill.

Why the Ringling Brothers and why their show, admittedly one of the greatest enterprises of the sort in history? One sees the glittering billboards, but passes by without asking these questions, which, if answered, would be sure to disclose romance.

Nowadays circuses are so firmly established as business ventures that if one proprietor passes out of the scene the property continues serenely on its course, like a great bank, a railroad, or some manufactory. But in former days, it seems, a circus was like a state, which rises to its zenith, declines and falls.

Ten year ago I stood one afternoon atop the portico of a hotel in El Paso. Through the plaza, beneath, a circus parade passed slowly.

Circus Was In Decline.

The parade was unimpressive. Truth to tell, the circus had seen better days. Formerly it had been a national institution and its owner had been famous throughout the country. But he had reached old age and dotage. Like him, the show had descended to a withering senility.

A woman in the party had been well acquainted with the owner of the show and with his family.

"Do you know," she said, turning to a newspaper correspondent, "this circus has been in the X— family for eighty-four years?"

The correspondent shook his head.

"It looks it," he said.

Nevertheless, a new and splendid show was to rise upon the ruins of the old one. New owners, coupling their energy and their money with an old and honored name, even then were rebuilding its glories. Three years later, when I saw it in an eastern city, it again was glitteringly and triumphantly refulgent.

It is now in the neighborhood of thirty-five years since old Yankee Robinson (not to be confused with the celebrated John Robinson) was considering ways and means of getting out of the circus business.

Age was leaving its mark on him, as it leaves its mark on every man.

Robinson Had Small Show.

Yankee Robinson's circus was not a big one. It was, in fact, merely a small wagon show, with a little menagerie. Still, it was complete and it was well-managed.

Somewhere out in the reaches of the middle west, Yankee Robinson met up with a small tent show run by five boys from Baraboo, Wis. They were brothers and their name was Ringling—Al, Otto, Alf T., Charles and John.

Old Yankee's circus was small, but their's was positively tiny. It boasted a menagerie, but what a menagerie! It consisted mostly of a hyena!

The Robinson and the Ringling trails seem to have crossed several times before it occurred to anyone that the veteran showman and the young showmen could join forces to advantage.

Eventually, however, Robinson perceived that the Ringling Brothers were just the right sort to take over his circus. As for the boys, pushing their way upward in a world fraught with struggle, it dawned on them, one day, that the Robinson circus could well provide the next step in their climb.

In 1887, in the old home town of Baraboo, they had launched their first amusement venture—a concert company in which they were the sole performers. All the brothers were musicians and they formed a little orchestra which became famous locally.

Started As Musicians.

"By George," said neighbors and friends," the way you boys play you ought to give concerts. That's a fact."

Al, Otto, Alf T., Charles and John considered the matter. After all, a and doesn't bother to take out the gold!

WHAT would you say of a man who owned a gold mine but hadn't the gumption to get out the gold. He's not rich either. He's working for a salary or wages just as you are. And what's more, he could make good use of some extra money if he knew a way to get it—just as you probably could use some extra money. Yet, here's the man with a gold mine and he does not even bother to get the gold out.

But don't be too hard on him because you also have a gold mine and maybe you're not working your mine either! Your idle dollars are the gold mine.

Now a gold mine has to be worked to get the gold out. And it's the same with your savings. If you work them they will produce money for you. The way to work your savings is to invest them. Weird Car, Constructed by Johnny Hines, Reported a Sensation—In Lincoln Monday and Tuesday at 12 and 3 o'Clock.

Johnny Hines' driverless Buick, which has been causing a sensation in hundreds of cities in the country, and which is making a transcontinental trip from New York to California, will make its appearance on the streets of Lincoln Monday and Tuesday between twelve and three o'clock of both days.

This unusual car, which has set such cities as New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Toronto, Chicago, and Des Moines agape with its exploits, has been creating no end of speculation as to the means of locomotion. With no driver visible at the wheel, this car threads its way in and out of the heaviest traffic, climbs steps, and is otherwise capable of performing a host of thrilling feats that are said to be almost uncanny. It will even obey the automatic safety signals and stop lights.

Many speculations have been offered as to how the car is driven. Some people are positive in their opinions that the car is propelled by radio waves which emanate from the car that precedes it. Others are of the opinion that the "driverless" wonder is propelled by a special electrical device that is hidden somewhere in the machine.

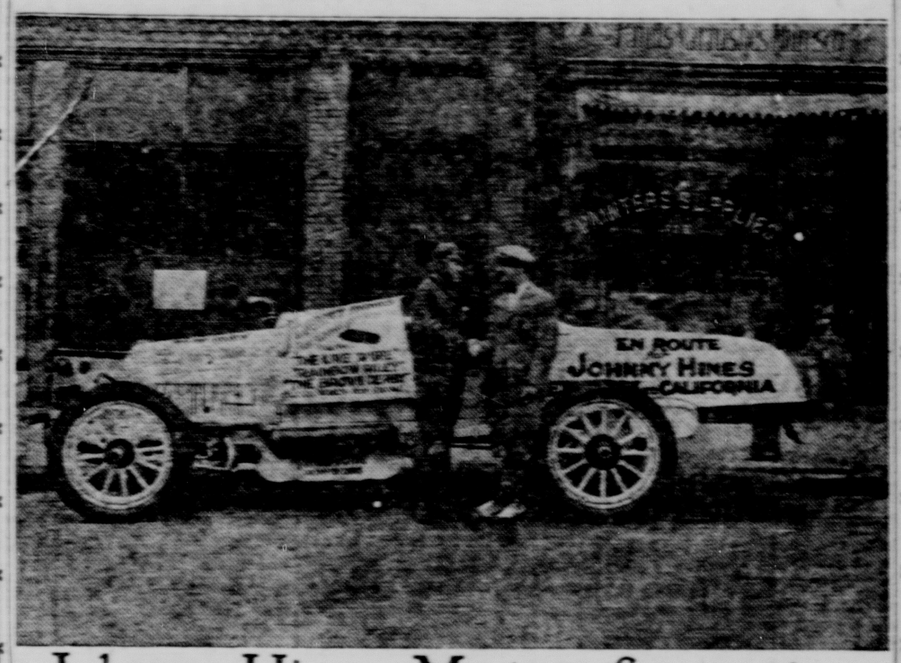

However, despite these conjectures, the car which sports the name of Johnny Hines and First National Pictures, is decidedly a unique piece of mechanism. It has traveled over 143,000 miles already, and will probably run another fifty thousand miles before its present tour is completed.

The "driverless" Buick is equipped with Firestone tires and an Exide storage battery. While in Lincoln it will burn A. B. A. gasoline and oil.

The car is also here in connection with the showing of Johnny Hines' latest picture, Johnny Hines in the Brown Derby at the Lyric.

The car may be seen at the Standard Auto Tire company, the Lyric theater, the A. B. A. filling station, Pinney's Garage, and at the Nebraska Buick building.

ANSWERS TO Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I have been a steady reader of your "Answers to Movie Fans" for about a year. Doesn't it take a dreadfully long time for you to answer all of our letters?

No doubt you have answered these questions before but I forgot to remember them.

Patsy of Crete, Neb., remarked that she sent in a list of names and addresses of movie addresses that one could obtain a picture from without the usual quarter. I wonder if you still have the list and if you would print it for me, please? If you do not have it maybe Patsy might send it again.

Could you give me the addresses of Madge Bellamy, Mary Pickford, Neil Hamilton and Dorothy Phillips. Where and when were they born? What is their height, weight and age? Thanking you, I remain BABE of Beatrice, Nebr.

Glad to have you become an active member of our clan, Babe.

Sometimes it seems like a long time, when I have a big handful of letters on my desk to answer, but I struggle valiantly onto the end.

I regret that I did not keep Patsy's list. However, it included the names of most of the film celebrities so you are safe in taking a chance without the quarter, if you wish.

It might cheer you up considerably to know that the studios are now supplying the photographs for players who are new in the profession and as yet too little paid to stand the expense of mailing thousands of pictures out daily to their admirers. The higher salaried players could still keep the wolf from the door if you forgot the quarter.

Address Miss Bellamy at the Fox Studio, 1401 North Western Ave., Hollywood. She was born in Texas, twenty-three years ago. She is five feet three in height and weighs 110.

Mary Pickford honors Toronto, Canada, as her birthplace in 1893. She is just five feet tall and tries to keep her weight at an even 100 pounds. Write to her in care of her own company, 7100 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood.

Mr. Hamilton receives fan mail at the Lasky Studio, Hollywood. He was born in Lynn, Mass., twenty-seven years ago. He's five feet eleven in height and weighs 165.

Miss Phillips is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City, Calif. Baltimore was her native city. She was born in 1892 and is now five feet three an done-half inches tall and weighs 125.

Dear Movie Editor—I would like to have you tell me all you can about Roy D'Arcy. What is his father's name? What is his birthplace? How old is he? Is this his right name?

Could you give me the cast for "The Black Pirate?" I am also another one for Buck Jones.

What is Hoot Gibson's next film? Who plays with him?

Hoping I haven't taken up too much room this time, because I hope to come again, I remain JUST A MOVIE FAN, Inavale, Neb.

Your home town seems to be well represented today.

Roy D'Arcy was born in San Francisco, Calif., in 1890, but received his education in Germany and England. His father's name is John J. Giusti, so Giusti is Mr. D'Arcy's real name.

Mr. D'Arcy began his stage experience in Germany, when he sang in light comic opera during the time he was a student.

He has traveled all over, and was at one time in the employ of the Standard Oil Company in South America. He speaks five languages.

He made his debut on the speaking stage in this country in Shubert's revues. He played a prominent part in Earl Carroll's vanities and "Oh, Boy."

It was while he was working with Peggy Wood in "The Clinging Vine" that he became interested in motion pictures. His first important picture work was as the Crown Prince in "The Merry Widow."

Since then he has appeared in "La Boheme," "Beverly of Graustark," "The Masked Bride" and "Monte Carlo."

Mr. D'Arcy has dark hair and blue eyes. He is five feet ten in height and weighs 150 pounds.

The cast for "The Black Pirate" includes: Douglas Fairbanks, Billie Dove, Tempe Pigott, Donald Crisp, Sam De Grasse, Andera Randolf, Charles Stevens John Wallace, Fred Becker, Charles Belcher, E. J. Ratcliffe.

Screen Siftings

Building Temple Set—The carpenters are busy at the De Mille studios, building sets for Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed feature, "The King of Kings." One of the largest sets to be made is one representing the temple of Jehova, which will provide one of the spectacular backgrounds for the story. Paul Iribe, who designed the sets in "The Ten Commandments" has charge of the art direction for the new picture. William Cowan, who has been associated with the Russian director, Dimitri Buchowetski, has been chosen by Mr. De Mille as his assistant for the "King of Kings." Rudolph Schildkraut has been chosen for the role of Judas Iscariot, and there is much speculation among the film colony as to what players will be lucky enough to be cast in the other prominent roles.

To Direct Lillian Gish—John S. Robertson, who was responsible for "The Bright Shawl," has been chosen to see Lillian Gish through "Annie Laurie," her next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. Norman Kerry will take the part of "John Ferguson," in the story of the highlands of Scotland, and Creighton Hale will appear as "Donald." Hobart Bosworth plays "The Laird of Glencoe," Joseph Striker as "Alastair," Russell Simpson, "Sandy," and Patricia Avery "Enid," making an imposing cast for Miss Gish.

Son of Francis X. Bushman Gives Plenty of Promise of Following Dads Footsteps

Francis X. Bushman, jr., son of the matinee idol of the days when the films were young, has been added to the Metro stock company. Francis is considered one of the promising "new faces" of the season.

The lovely Irene Rich is reported engaged to a man by the name of Blankenhorn—a millionaire, m'dears. Her first husband was an army officer, but that knot was cut long years ago, and she has raised her two daughters on movie money. She doesn't acknowledge the engagement, nor does she deny it vehemently.

Dost remember "Kitten" Richards, who was the Baby Peggy of her day? Some dozen years ago that was. Well, Kitten went into retirement when her legs and arms became gangling, and became a school girl like millions of others. She's come back now, at sixteen, and she is to have an ingenue role in W. C. Fields' second starring number, "So's Your Old Man."

This sounds pretty good. Samuel Goldwyn has purchaed an original short story "Chains," by Frances Marion, scenarist of "Stella Dallas" and "The Winning of Barbara Worth." Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are to be together again, and Belle Bennett will have an important role. Production will be delayed, as Ronald and Vilma are in the midst of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and Belle Bennett is acting about somewhere in Hollywood.

New Sea Classic.

Autumn will see the beginning of activities on "Two Years Before the Mast," Richard H. Dana's sea classic. Production plans call for several months of research work and at least one year's camera activity, so don't reserve your seats yet. Roland West, the director, will build a replica of the historic sailing vessel of Dana's voyage, and will take his own crew, cast, and technical staff covering the same territory that the author describes.

After much discussion and cogitation, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is to be given a start early in August. Charles Gilpin, who played the name part in O'Neill's "Emperor Jones" is to be Uncle Tom. Topsy and Eva and all the other folks of my old Kentucky home yet remain to be chosen.

"The Return of Peter Grimm" is to go into production over at the Fox studios. Alex Francis will have David Warfield's old titular role. This is the second of four of Belasco's well known dramas to be screened by Fox. The others are "The Music Master," "The Auctioneers" and "The Lily," which has been filmed, with Belle Bennett in the title role.

May McAvoy, who insists on free lancing, is having an engagement with her physician and a quiet room at present. Since she returned from Rome, where she had the leading feminine role of Esther in "Ben Hur," she has had no rest, and almost collopsed during the filming of "The Fire Brigade," in which she is co-featured with Charles Ray. She may go to Honolulu for her rest, and she may just stay at home with egg noggs and vitamine vegetables.

No More Villany.

Erich von Stroheim is a changed man! He's not going about on his villainous way any more! Instead of leaving broken hearts and blasted futures in his wake, he has reformed into an average man, neither a hero nor a villain, but a mixture of both. He portrays his new character in "The Wedding March," his latest production. He has the usual weakness for the ladies, but allows himself to be reformed ere all is over. Fay Wray is the feminine lead, a more or less unknown one. She came to von Stroheim's attention after she had been an extra in comedies and a lead. She was a western heroine when discovered for her big chance.

In housewifely fashion, First National went a-borrowing the other day. When the borrower returned home, he had Louise Brooks and William Collier jr.,—no longer Buster since "The Wanderer"—two of Famous players best known young players. They are to have important roles "The Charleston Kid," which appeared in story form as "Even Stephen." Louise served as leading lady for Adolph Menjou in "A Social Celebrity" and achieved prominence as one of the beauties of "The American Venus." Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall—another two who are developing into a team—have the leads.

Rivals for Fame.

Jack Gilbert and Ronny Colman are quite the rivals for fame, but Ronny seems to hold up his end. Samuel Goldwyn has torn up his five year contract and presented him with a new act, guaranteeing a huge weekly salary and pictures suited to the debonair Ronny's eyebrows.

Marion Nixon arrived in New York the other day to cast her bright eyes over the bright lights. She say things for just three days. Universal sent a little yellow letter, inviting Marion to come home and star in "Taxi! Taxi!"—and Marion took the taxi pronto.

Three new productions will start at the Paramount Long Island studio in the near future. "The Ace of Cads," a screen story by Michael Arlen, with Adolphe Menjou. "The Quarterback," Richard Dix's football story, and "So's Your Old Man" "The Great Gatsby," now the only picture in production at the eastern studio, will be completed in another week.

Irvin Cobb is on his way from New York to Hollywood to complete his story, "Turkish Delight." It's a comedy based on the emancipation of the Turkish woman, and Cobb is said to have made the most of his opportunities in the story.

May Robon is the latest arrival in Hollywood. Cecil DeMille signed the long time star some time ago. Her first movie production will be announced later.

FIELDS BACK TO BROADWAY IN NEW FILM

Professor Eustace McGargle of Stage Fame Winning High Praise.

Absence of Mirth-Provoking Voice Compensated For In Titles.

BY BUSHNELL DIMOND.

NEW YORK, July. — In our thermal metropolis, these days, the most jovial event—aside from the subway strike, if you happen to live near your job—is Mr. W. C. ("Whitey") Fields. The gentleman of the dandelion thatch and the baby robin tenor is not, this time, in the flesh, but is amusing himself and many others as a motion picture comic in a little thing entitled "It's the Old Army Game."

I mention this fact prominently because Mr. Fields has struck me, ever since he was with McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree," as a truly first-rate maker of mirth, and because to those who dwell outside the annual orbit of the Follies the genial insanities in which he indulges on the screen will come with a fresh thrill of entertainment. He is beyond doubt the best silent drama acquisition since Roscoe Arbuckle introduced us to Buster Keaton.

J. P. Mccoy, author of "The Potters" and the lamented "Comic Strip," is credited with the three main incidents in "It's The Old Army Game," those dealing with the drugstore the back porch and the picnic. They are all revamped from the Follies, clamped and welded into a very funny, if flimsy, scenario by Ralph Spence, "gag man" de luxe who put "The Gorilla" over. From the first sequence, in which a melodramatic mood is swiftly established, only to be demolished in laughter, the job has been done with sly humor and intelligence.

D. W. Griffith, one-time starmaker, is supposed to have discovered Mr. Field's adaptability to camera uses. Few, if any, of my readers, who were then probably in rompers, recall the old billiard table picture that the comedian made for Mutual (wasn't it?) back in preworld war times. He was then a juggling clown who looked volumes, but spoke none. Not till Phillip Goodman, in sponsoring "Poppy," made his Balboa-like find of the famous Fields voice was that voice lifted in the brilliant bronchial utterances of "Professor Eustace McGargle."

That voice! It's a pity that the movies can't synchronize it with Field's forthcoming pictures. Half-chirp, half gulp, is has always seemed to indicate that its owner was strangling on some poached egg of emotion. It is irreplaceable However, the Messrs. McEvoy and Spencer have made some amends for its absence by substituting scenes and titles that shake one's gravity. The episode in which the weary pharmacist, Mr. Prettywillie, having handed his refractory neice a large mirror and mallet and got a good sock on the head in consequence carries through beautifully, the epilogue of "Uncle will now get you some nice razor blades," And when a fire alarm had summoned every clanging iron horse for forty miles and Mr. Field's sister said: "Get up, Elmer; I hear chimes,"—well, a little rolling in the aisles was permissible.

New Ziegfield Revue.

How direly the Fields touch is missed in Mr. Ziegfield's new and ultra-elaborate 'revue, only those who have seen him in The Follies can realize. This glittering thing was built up from the nucleus of "Palm Beach Nights;" renamed "No Foolin", and then christened simply The Ziegfield Revue of 1926. To say that its store of beauty, in dance, drapes, drops and glorified girls, is pressed down and running over is simply to state that no one in the world can do just that with the ease and finality of Ziegfield.

Yet—is he going the way of John Murray Anderson, who, like the puma of the poem, is admitted to have no sense of humah? The new revue would seem to bulwark the theory. There is, to be true, Jim Barton, doing oh! such very old stuff as the wandering souse. There is Ray Dooley, also with a familiar routine. There is a welcome flash of Bugs Baer. But no Fields? No Fannie Brice? No Tinney? Regrettable absences, all.

Dancing is very well done by the Golden Greta Nissen, snatched from the pictures which, in turn, had snatched her from "Beggar on Horseback." She is a Swedish love lyric come alive. Claire Luce, abandoning the tiger skins of the Music Box for Mr. Ziegfield's crystal globes, is lovely in mobile posture, if not in feature. Diminutive Edna Coxey trips and retreats like an engaging kitten. And always the garb is exquisite—and modest, withal.

Notes: Dennis King is out of "The Vagabond King" for a rest—David Belasco announces Katharine Cornell in Lorenzo de Azertis's much-deferred "The Desert"—The Newport Casino will establish an all-star stock company and a broad-minded repertory—Earle Larrimore, seen here was Hayakawa in "The Love City" and in John Lawson's "Nirvana," has replaced Alfred Lunt in "At Mrs. Beam's," while Estelle Winwood steps into the slippers of Lynn Fontanne—What has become of the Play Jury?

Mendez-Ince Nuptials—The newest marriage in film circles is that of Ralph Ince to Lucile Mendez. Mr. Ince is a motion picture producer and director, a brother to the late Tom Ince. He was formerly married to Lucile Lee Stewart, sister to Anita Stewart.

Paramount Completing Cast—Three important new additions have been made to the cast of "The Eagle of the Sea," Frank Lloyd's first Paramount production. They are Mitchell Lewis, James Marcus and George Irving. Mr. Irving will take the part of Andrew Jackson. Ricardo Cortez will portray Lafeyette, and Florence Vidor has the leading feminine role in the screen version of Charles Tenny Jackson's story, "Captain Sazarac."

Lead in Sixteen Films—Einar Hanson, who has the leading male character role in June Mathis' production, "The Masked Woman," has played leads in sixteen pictures out of the seventeen in which he has appeared before the camera.

Sills Plans Location Trip—Milton Sills and company plan on taking one of the longest location trips ever undertaken by a movie company when they go into the California desert to shoot scenes for "Men of the Dawn." The picture is adapted from Ludwig Biro's play "The Legionary," and will be the first Mr. Sills has made in the west for two years. The story is of the regeneration of a French waster serving in the foreign legion. Hundreds of extras will accompany Mr. Sills to the desert to portrary Arab and French soldiers in the mob scenes.

Deserts Horse-Shoe Games—The horse-shoe league at Lincoln Park in Long Beach, Calif., is a member short these days. Charles Ogle has deserted temporarily to resume his work before the camera. Mr. Ogle is working under Sam Wood's direction in the Red Grange production, "The Half Back." It's been a year and a half since his kindly face has appeared on the screen.

An thus, a pleasant happy day was spoiled, not because we needed not the rain, but because in times like these the people had no place to go. Many comments were heard as to the erection of an amphitheater large enough to accommodate in cases of this character, and, if we were not all of one creed and one doctrine, an edifice of this character might create a two-fold purpose—that of "A Haven of Rest in Time of Storm," and a commingling together that would lead to better acquaintances and closer friendships, and a means, perhaps, of aiding and abetting toward the making of a Greater Lincoln and a closer relation man for man, that could not be reached in any other way or under any other conditions.

HENRY ALLEN BRAINERD.

The Viewpoint.

Two maidens walked in a garden fair,
To one 'twas "horrid," one "so lovely there."
One saw the rose-tree's cruel thorns,
The other the rose that thorn-bush adorns.
It was just a difference in point of view,
Whether roses or thorns in the garden grew,
For that both were there we know full well,
And one bush grew both, so I've heard tell.

Two maidens walked in the edge of town,
One smelled the coal-smoke that drifted down,
The other inhaled, with well pleased eye
The sweetness of apple bloom drifting by.
One heard the rumble of passing train,
The other a meadow-lark's sweet refrain;
One saw a snake in a shadowy pool,
The other white lillies, stately and cool.

Two men glanced out through an open door,
One with eyes cast down to a cold stone floor,
The other's upraised to the sunset sky,
Where purple and golden cloud-banks lie.
'Twas again a difference in point of view,
And the self-same earth produced the two,
Yet one frowned down on the mud-stained cars,
The other thanked God for the sunset's bars.

start could be made without interfering with their present occupations. Two of them were giving music lessons ,two clerked in stores and the fifth taught school.

"Why not?" said one—it probably was John and "Why not?" echoed the others.

That winter witnessed their first tour. The concerts were given wherever vacant space could be had in neighboring towns—in barns, store rooms, armories and lodge halls. While four played, the fifth "did a turn." The concerts went over, too. The brothers more than paid expenses.

The next year they had a real season, wandering through Wisconsin and Iowa cities and towns. The year after, they added to their bookings. About this time, too, they made a wagon show of their organization. Buying a tent, they didn't have to worry about finding halls. The show gradually became a sort of circus. They hired other performers.

Incidentally they made three states, instead of two. Thus they ran into Yankee Robinson and got the idea that they might take over his show. They saved up some money.

Made Robinson Proposition.

Ringling brothers always have fought the idea that one of them had more than another to do with their success. Somehow, though John's name has come to mean more to the public than that of the other brothers. When the Ringlings finally got down to discussing business with Yankee Robinson, it is likely that John did the talking.

"We're growing," the old showman was told. "We'd like to take over your show."

"I like you boys," said Yankee, "but how about the money?"

There was a rub there. The Ringlings had done pretty well, but they didn't have the cash to take over the circus, small though it was. However, Yankee had taken a fancy to them and he found a way out.

"Tell you what we'll do," he said. "I'll give you a lease on the show and travel with you and look you over. And I can keep my eye on the property, too. If you do well we can fix up the terms."

For two years, the veteran traveled with the brothers. He became their mentor, guide and favorite philosopher. And he took such a liking to them that every matinee and night he got up before the audience to declare: "Ladies and gentlemen: You'll live to see what old Yank tells you is true—these boys are going to be really great circus men."

Brothers Showed Ability.

Yankee in two years time had the opportunity of studying the brothers' business ability and he knew it was great. They ceased to be performers. Al became equestrian director in charge of the performances; Otto served as treasurer and financial man; Alf T. was the press agent; Charles acted as general agent and handled the billing; and John made all contracts and did the routing. Working in perfect harmony, the brothers had two splendid seasons and bought the property.

"Be fair to the public," was old Yank's parting advice. It was advice that the brothers sought to follow. It earned for the show, among grifters and grafters, the nickname of "the Sunday School circus"; but it didn't hurt its reputation with the public.

The circus' first expansion came in 1892, when it became a railroad show. Lates there were consolidations by which it absorbed some of the biggest of its competitors.

The keynote of its success was that while the brothers divided the job of running the circus they all stuck together. Al, Otto and Alf T. now are dead, but Charles and John have maintained the tradition.

In all our history we have had no more striking instance of family loyalty.

ONCE COULDN'T EXERCISE VIEWS

man Catt at her right, and next to her, the Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane, and on the other side of the chairman, Lucy Stone Blackwell. She told of her suffrage reminiscences at the banquet.

Joined Few Orders.

Earlier in her life, Miss Harn was a member of the Order of Good Templars, and organization similar to the W. C. T. U., but admitting both men and women. This organization was the first to allow women to be members on the same basis with men, and Miss Harn was heartily in favor of it, not only in its purpose but in its judgment.

"After that I never joined another organization that did not allow men and women the same membership standing. I have never joined the G. A. R., because women could only join the auxiliary, a subsidiary organization."

In 1860, Miss Harn was one of three women who served as delegates to the worthy grand lodge of North America of the Good Templars. A young southern minister, rising to protest at the actions of the northeast states, suddenly burst forth with a political talk, saying such lack of unanimity meant dissolution of the union. Miss Harn pulled him to his seat, asking him what he meant by such remarks and slightly reprimanding him for such thoughts. Less than a year later, the young man was on his way with the confederates to Harper's ferry.

While Miss Harn was teaching in Minneapolis, where she went as soon as the public schools were organized, a young man died of delirium tremens. A young Congregational minister, living at the same place, asked some of the Good Templars to go into the saloons, and plead with the owners not to sell liquor and to give up the business. Miss Harn was among those who responded to his request, and she spent some time in such close work with the liquor business.

Sees Success Now.

There are those who say that it has been a futile thing to give women the ballot. They say that the long years of effort and the promises of the women have been without avail and that they have not been realized.

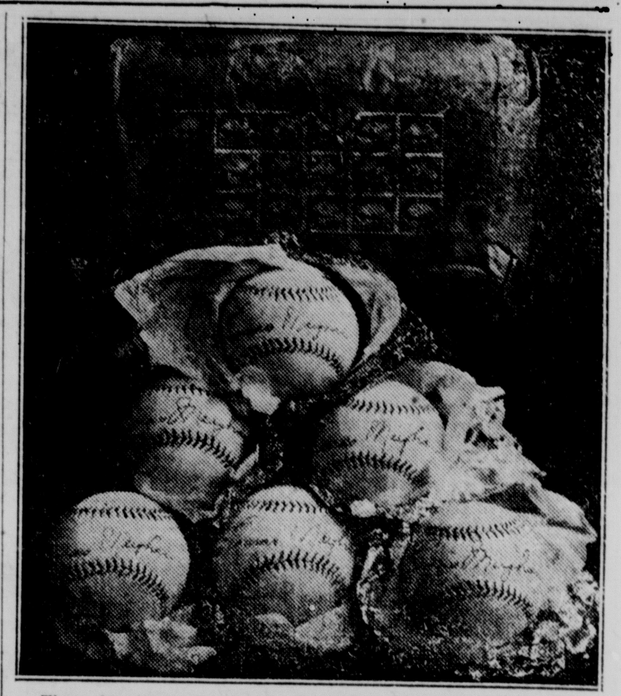

Miss Harn does not agree with those who look so pessimistically at the question. In her opinion, people have not looked deeply enough beneath the surface. They have criticised because a millenium has not been reached within a half dozen years.

Woman suffrage is worthwhile she thinks. Women will use the ballot vigorously and wisely when the time comes that they need it. They do not spend all their energies in today's problems, but are looking forward to the future. They are building today for tomorrow, a better and brighter tomorrow for their children and grandchildren.

And because Miss Harn so eagerly sought suffrage that she might work through the ballot box for prohibition, she is very well satisfied with her work and that of dozens of other women. Since she has seen saloons banished from Kenesaw, and can go down to the village without being disturbed by a reeling man, her efforts of seventy-six years have not been without their compensation. And her satisfaction is even deeper when she realizes that her little world is but symbolical of the larger world.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I read your page every Sunday and find it very interesting.

I am sending the cast for "Wild to Go," which "Snooky" of sterling asked for. "Tom Blake," Tom Tyler; "Frankie Blake," Francis Darrow; "Simon Purdy," Fred Burns; "Jake Trumbull," Ethan Laidlow; "An Accomplice," Earl Haley; "Marjorie Felton," Eugenie Gilbert; "Setting Bull," by himself.

My favorite among the men are Richard Dix, Raymond Griffith, Jack Gilbert and Ricardo Cortez. Among the women my favorites are Norma Talmadge, Lois Wilson, May McAvoy, Vilma Banky, Billie Dove, and Marie Prevost.

In the Gilbert-Colman contest, I will cast my vote for Gilbert though I think the men are too unlike to be compared.

I would like to know if Douglas Fairbanks, jr., ever played in a picture with Norma Talmadge as her son. If not, who was it?

Next time I will have more questions for you. You may sign me, "a faithful reader." Davey, Neb.

Thank you so much for supplying the cast for "Snooky."

I have no record of Douglas Fairbanks, jr., playing with Norma Talmadge at all. George Hackathorne took the role of her son in "The Lady." Is he the "son" you seek?

Dear Movie Editor—I am going to bother you again.

I have just seen the picture, "Sandy." I surely liked it, and would like to have the address of Madge Bellamy, her age, color of hair and eyes and if she is married and also to whom. Also her weight? I surely love to see her play. She is so pretty.

I also saw the picture, "The Road to Yesterday." I didn't like it at all—did you, or have you seen it?

Vera Reynolds did her part well, but I couldn't understand it at all. It started so funny and ended all right, but the center of the picture was sure "hunk."

I see there is an argument over Jack Gilbert and Ronald Colman. I saw Jack in "The Merry Widow." He did well enough, too, but I like Ronald Colman the best.

Who is playing opposite William Desmond in his new picture, "The Return of the Riddle Rider?"

Well, I've asked enough questions so I remain Jackie Mac.

It's a pleasure to hear from you, Jackie mac, and not a bother.

You may write to Miss Bellamy at the Fox Studio, 1401 north Western Avenue, Hollywood, Calif. She is single—seems impossible, doesn't it? Her beauty is much enchanced by her dark hair and eyes. She recently celebrated her twenty-third birthday by treating herself to a trip to Europe. Madge weighs 118.

You couldn't enjoy "The Road to Yesterday" very well if you didn't understand it. The story was a little ambiguous in spots. Mr. De Mille used the reincarnation theory for the theme of his picture. If you will keep that in mind it might help to clear up some of the cloudy points for you.

Lois Todd, one of the Baby Wampas stars of 1925, plays opposite Mr. Desmond in "The Return of the Riddle Rider."

Dear Movie Editor—I am just a new movie fan, although I have read your magnificent columns for about three years. I surely think that you are clever to possess so much knowledge of the movie stars.

I am just wild about Lois Wilson. She is my favorite star. I think she has the prettiest eyes on the screen. They seem to indicate peacefulness and harmony, and so I want to know everything you know about her, birthplace, age, color of hair and eyes, complexion and Oh! Just everything! If I had Miss Wilson here I would just kiss her I think she is an extraordinary beauty a type you seldom find. A type with beauty, personality and grace combined. I also wish to know if this is her real name and if she is married or not.

I cast another vote for Jack Gilbert. Ronald seems too "satisfied" for a man.

My favorite actor is Richard Dix. What is his next picture and who plays opposite him. Oh, Gee! I hope it's Lois. They certainly would make a beautiful couple.

I believe I'd better sign off and give the rest a chance.

Hoping to see my answers next Sunday, I am Galloping Gertie, Sutton, Neb.

Lois and I both bow! You are most generous with your praise.

Lois Wilson claims Pittsburgh, Pa., as her birthplace in 1896. When she was still a small child, her parents moved to Birmingham, Ala., where she was raised. She studied to be a school teacher, and taught for three weeks, but the lure of the stage was too great. She decided to go to Chicago, and here she was introduced to Lois Weber. Through Miss Weber, she was given a small part in "The Dumb Girl of Portici." She did so well that Miss Weber took her to Los Angeles, where she played leads with J. Warren Kerrigan and Frank Keenan.

She entered the Lasky forces as leading woman for Wallace Reid and Bryant Washburn. William De Mille chose her for an important role in "Midsummer Madness," and she then did Maud Adams' part of "Miggie Wylie" in Sir James Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," which Mr. De Mille produced. She has since played in featured roles in a great many big Paramount productions, among them "The Covered Wagon," and "The Vanishing American."

Miss Wilson has dark brown hair and eyes. She weighs 120 and is five feet five and one half inches high.

You will have to get your hanky out, because Alyce Mills and not Lois plays with Richard in his new picture, "The Quarterback." Lois played with him in a recent release, "Let's Get Married."

Dear Movie Editor—I am a new writer but I guess it doesn't matter.

I would like to know if Jack Mulhall's wife is a movie actress. Her name is Evelyn Winans, is it not? Will you please give me their address as I would like to write to them. His wife's name is the same as mine. Is that her real name? If not, what is it?

What is Monte Blue's address also? Where would I write to get a picture of Strongheart, the dog?

What is Betty Bronson's address? Also Tom Mix's? Are they married and if so to whom?

Well, I will close. Yours truly, BOOTS.

We are always glad to add new writers to our departments, so you see it does matter.

Mrs. Mulhall was on the legitimate stage before her marriage, but she has only been before the camera in small parts. That is her real name, and you may write to them at the Biograph Studios, 807 East 175th St., New York City, where Jack is working opposite Dorothy Mackaill.

If you will write to Jane Murfin, in care of First National Pictures, 5431 Melrose Ave., she will be glad to mail you a photograph of Strongheart.

Betty Bronson is at the Biograph Studios, also at present, but she is under contract to Famous Players-Lasky, so perhaps you had better write to her at the Lasky Studio, 1520 Vine St., Hollywood. She is single. Tom Mix is married to Victoria Forde. Write Tom at Fox Studio, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood.

Dear Movie Editor—Like all the rest, I can't stay away long, so here I am again.

I've a hard job for you this time. Will you try to tell me all you possibly can about Tom Tyler. Tom isn't so very famous so I don't suppose you know as much about him as some of the more noted actors, but I would like to know his age, where he was born, and his address. Is Tom Tyler his real name? Do you know his father's name?

I was very glad to hear the other fans' ideas as to Tom Mix and Buck Jones' pictures. I'm still for Buck. To my notion Tom just spoils all by being so conceited. To tell the truth, I've outgrown both Tom Mix and Buck Jones pictures.

Please tell me all you can about Marceline Day. I think she's a dear, don't you?

I would like the casts of "Desert Gold," "Forlorn River," and "Born to the West."

One of the fans addressed you as "Mr. Movie Man," or something to that effect, but you're a woman aren't you? I just know you are, because a man couldn't be so patient and sweet tempered.

Well, I guess I must ring off or you will think I'm a very bothersome person. Sincerely yours, BLUE EYES, Inavale, Neb.

It would be easy enough for either man or woman to keep sweet with such letters as your in the mail. I seem to be somewhat of an enimma—even to my family.

Mr. Tyler is twenty-three years old and was born in Port Henry, New York. He towers skyward six feet and one inch, but is so perfectly proportioned you would never suspect his height, unless you stood close to him. He is a splendid athlete and holds two world's weight-lifting records. He has brown hair and eyes, and tips the scales at 198.

If Mr. Tyler has another name he keeps it carefully concealed. He neglects to inform us just how his father signs his name.

Little Miss Day was the first of the Wampas Baby stars of 1926 to be singled out by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios for leading roles in pictures. Shortly after she was chosen by the Wampas club as one of their new flock of stars, she was given the leading role with Lew Cody in "The Gay Deceiver."

She made her first success in "The Barrier," after two years as an "extra" in pictures. She was born in Denver with brown curly hair and blue eyes. She's a sister to Alice Day, also a motion picture player.

I nearly forgot to tell you Tom's address. You may write him at the F. B. O. studio, 780 Gower street, Hollywood, Cal.

The cast for "Desert Gold," is: "George Thorne," Neil Hamilton; "Mercedes Castanada," Shirley Mason; "Dick Gale," Robert Frazer; "Landree," William Powell; "Sebastian Castaneda," Josef Swickard; "Richard Stanton Gale," George Irving; "One Round Kelly," Eddie Gribbon; "Taqui," Frank Lackteen; "Sergeant," Richard Howard; "Gout Herder," Bernard Siegel; "Verd," George Rigas, "Halfwit," Ralph Yearsley; "Alacon's," Aline Goodwin.

The featured players in "Born to the West," are Jack Holt, Margaret Morris, Raymond Hatton and Arlette Marchal. The supporting cast includes George Seigmann, Bruce Gordon, Edith Yorke, and Tom Kennedy.

Jack Holt, Raymond Hatton and Arlette Marchal are again featured in "Forlorn River." The other members of that cast are Edmund Burns, Tom Suetschi, Joseph Girard, Nola Luxford and Christian Frank.

Screen Siftings

To Play Opposite Moreno—Renee Adoree is expected back from New York in a few days to start work opposite Antonio Moreno in "The Flaming Forest," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will produce. The story is adapted from a novel by James Oliver Curwood, and is an account of the founding of the Northwest mounted police. Reginald Barker will direct the production which will be released as one of the big features of the year.

Making "Pals in Paradise"—Admirers of Marguerite De La Motte and John Bowers will be pleased to know that they are to be co-featured again in pictures. "Pals in Paradise" is the title of their new production. It's a screen version of Peter B. Kyne's story. Miss De La Motte has just completed a role in Metropolitan's screen version of "The Last Frontier," and Mr. Bowers' last work before the camera was in the role of "Laddie" an adaptation of Gene Stratton Porter's novel.

THE ANN ARBOR

A Cozy, Five Room House.

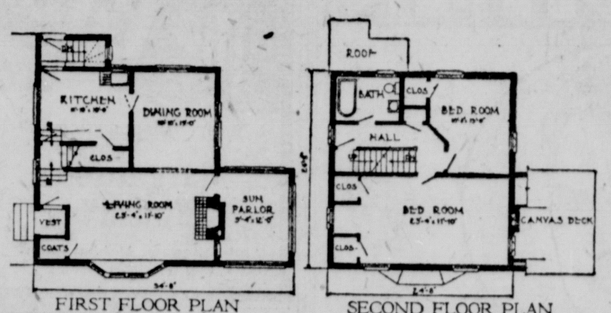

This type of house is excellent for the large suburban lot. It would best be fitted to the landscape on a lot which sloped to a garden in the rear. The plain front with its unobtrusive entrance canopy would legically be rather close to the street, allowing a fine view of the lawn and garden from the sunporch and dining room at the rear.

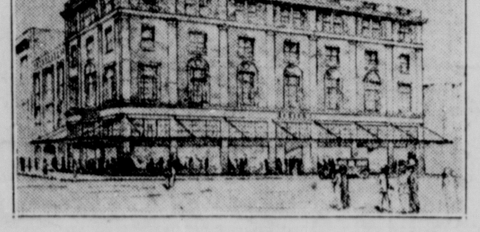

Economy without cheapness is effected in the straight roof lines. Further economy is achieved by the use of concrete block covered with portland cement stucco for wall construction. Through the use of white stucco, the trim and color of shutters is made to stand in pleasing harmony. Concrete tile used in the roof completes this attractive home.

The use of these firesafe and permanent materials throughout assures the owner that he will have a house that cannot burn down or deteriorate. Annual painting of the outside woodwork is the only attention the exterior needs. This low maintenance cost, coupled with savings in insurance premiums, result in considerable savings as the years roll by.

The Building Department Editor of this paper can advise readers interested in the above home where complete plans and specifications may be obtanied at a nominal cost.

THE new Speier Building, now rapidly approaching completion on the corner of Tenth and "O" streets, is perhaps the finest example of commercial architecture to be found in Lincoln. Much of the charm of this delightful building comes from the rich coloring and pleasing texture of the brick walls. THE GUMPS

GEE! WE FOUND THE CITY OF GOLD AT LAST

WITH UNSCALABLE WALLS OF ROCK ON THE NORTH, SOUTH AND WEST THE THREE ADVENTURERS REALIZE THEIR ONE ESCAPE IS TO FIND AN EASTERN OUTLET FROM THE VALLEY OF WHISPERING VOICES-

THIS ILLITERATE PERSON BELIEVES STUDIED PREPARATION IS THE SEED OF SUCCESS-

I'LL CARRY A FEW STICKS OF DYNAMITE TO USE IF WE HAVE TO BLAST OUR WAY OUT-

IF WE CAN ONLY FIND A WAY OUT OF THIS OLD VALLEY I'LL BE GLAD-

NOW THAT WE HAVE HIDDEN THE THINGS WE CAN'T CARRY IN THAT CAVE WE OUGHT TO WEIGH OUR ANCHOR AT ONCE-

IT IS WRITTEN A PRUDENT HASTE IS A SIGN OF WISDOM-

WE CAN'T START TOO SOON TO PLEASE ME-

THIS IS OUR LAST CHANCE- IF WE DON'T FIND A WAY OUT NOW WE ARE TRAPPED IN THE VALLEY FOREVER-

WE'LL ALL BE OUT OF HERE BEFORE THE SUN SETS- AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT-

UNENDING PERSEVERANCE IS AN INVINCIBLE GRIND STONE FOR ALL OBSTACLES-

MY COMMONPLACE EYES ARE GLADDENED BY THE SIGHT OF THE WAY TO FREEDOM-

HURRAH! WE'RE OUT OF THE VALLEY AT LAST-

WHOOP-EE!

LIVELY MATES- THERE'S A STORM BREWING - A CREW OF LUBBERLY PIRATES ARE HIDDEN IN THAT JUNGLE AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT-

WE HAD BETTER DUCK BEHIND THIS TREE-

I'LL JUST FIRE THE FIRST SHOT IN THE AIR-

YOU FIRE A SHOT ACROSS THEIR BOW- THE SOUND OF FIREARMS MAY MAKE THEM CHANGE THEIR TACK-

ONLY BY THE MOST UNDIGNIFIED HASTE CAN WE ASSURE OUR CONTINUED EXISTENCE-

GOLLY, I WISH I WAS SAFE AT HOME-

IF THIS DYNAMITE FAILS OUR GOOSE IS COOKED THE BLACK BRIGANDS ARE GAINING AND THEY'LL SOON HAVE US AT THEIR MERCY-

BAM!

YOUR BENEVOLENT DYNAMITE FILLS THE UNWORTHY ONES WITH JUSTIFIED APPREHENSION-

IF WE CAN REACH THE ENTRANCE TO THE VALLEY WE CAN MAKE A STAND AGAINST THEM-

OH BOY!

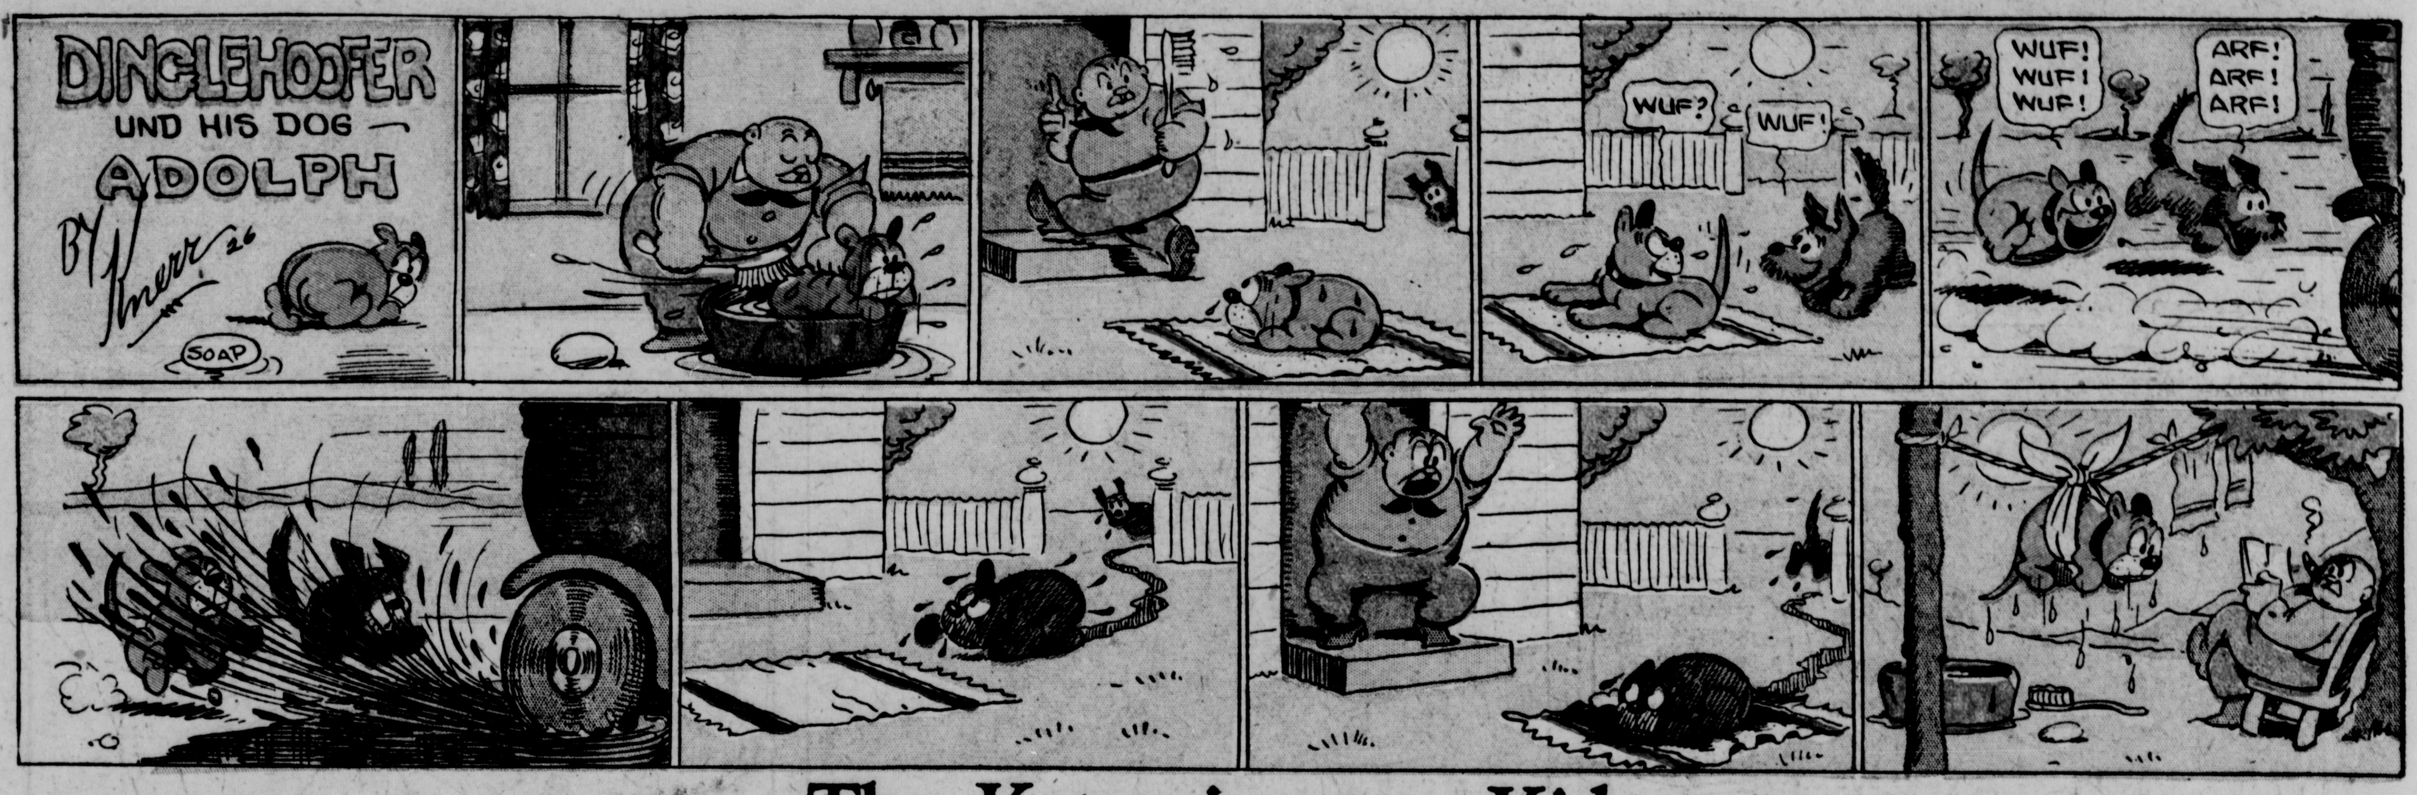

WITH FIENDISH HOWLS THE SAVAGES PREPARE TO ATTACK, WHILE THE THREE ADVENTURERS RESOLVE TO FIGHT TO THE END AS THEY KNOW ONLY TOO WELL THE TORTURES SAVAGES INFLICT ON HELPLESS CAPTIVES-

IT MAKES MY FLESH CREEP TO HEAR THE WAY THEY HOWL-
